DEMPSEY POISONED, SAYS DOCTOR

New York, Oct. 1 (I.N.S.)---Jack Dempsey was "self-poisoned" on the night of Sept. 23 and, therefore, was not capable of putting up his best performance when he lost the heavyweight title. This was the verdict of Dr. Frank H. Russell, following an examination of the former champion this afternoon. He predicted Dempsey would be able to leave his quarters within a day or two.

BETTING ODDS FAVOR YANKEES FOR OPENER

New York, Oct. 1 (I.N.S.)---"Fair and warmer" is promised by the weather man for the opening game of the world series tomorrow. Warm, balmy temperatures prevailed today and there was plenty of sunshine.

New York, Oct. 1.---"We're ready!" This was the confident statement made this afternoon by Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals after an impressive workout over on the eve of the opening of the World's series with the Yankees.

The Yankees are 6 to 5 favorites to win the first game. The betting today was 10 to 8 the Yankees would win the series.

Betting was brisk. It was estimated that $300,000 has already been wagered in New York on the outcome of baseball's blue ribbon classic.

$3,000,000 AT STAKE.

A conservative estimate to the effect that $3,000,000 will be wagered on the series in various parts of this country.

The opening game will be witnessed by 63,000 persons. Twice this number would be on hand if there were that many seats.

There was snap and fire today in the batting and fielding practice of the National eLague champions. Hornsby, Bottomley, Southworth, Bell and the other members of the Cardinals' brigade drove the ball to the far corners of the lot and fielded in brilliant fashion.

Hornsby was quiet, but gave no other outward sign of being depressed by the recent death of his mother.

Mild, milling crowds jammed New York today for the opening of the series tomorrow. Fans have gathered from all parts of the country. From St. Louis came several thou-

RED CROSS CHIEF HITS 'DECEPTION' BY FLORIDA

Washington, Oct. 1 (A.P.)---Florida officials, from the Governor down, and real estate operators, were accused today by John Barton Payne, American Red Cross chairman, of handicapping Red Cross plans through minimizing of losses in the Florida hurricane.

The sentiments of Mr. Payne were disclosed in a telegram to C. C. Pinckney, chairman of the Richmond, Va., Red Cross Chapter which discussed the financial needs of the situation.

"The poor people who suffered are regarded as of less consequence than the hotel and tourist business in Florida," the telegram said. "The Red Cross feels bound to go forward and do the job just the same and everyone should help.

"Our officials on the ground report the greatest need since the San Francisco disaster, with 5,000 homes destroyed and 18,000 families impoverished. Red Cross assistance is given only on basis of actual ned, not losses."

The message was sent in reply to an inquiry received from Mr. Pickney which read:

"City of Richmond believing that Miami and surrounding country had suffered greatly voted $10,000 to

SHIP AFIRE, 35 IN PERIL AS SHE RACES FOR PORT

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 1 (A.P.)---The American steamship New Britain, her deck plates beginning to buckle from the heat of fire that has burned in her hold since late yesterday, was 200 miles off Charleston, at 11 o'clock today, proceeding under her own steam, but her officers doubt if she can make port. She carries a crew of 35 men.

The government wireless station at St. Augustine picked up the following message from the New Britain at 11 o'clock:

"Will try and make Charleston if revenue cutter arrives, but am doubtful, as deck plates are buckling and red-hot. Now 200 miles from Charleston. Fire still raging. Steamship New Britain, fisher, disaster."

The steamship Rochester, of the Vacuum Oil Company, reported she was twenty miles from the New Britain and proceeding to her assistance. The Mallory line steamer San Jacinto also wirelessed that it was hurrying to the stricken vessel's aid.

The revenue cutter Seneca was due to arrive alongside the New Britain at noon.

COOLIDGES WILL SEE 'BUCKY' HARRIS WED

Washington, Oct. 1.---(I.N.S.)---Capital society and officialdom headed by President and Mrs. Coolidge, will mingle with luminaries of the sporting world this afternoon to witness the marriage of Stanley (Bucky) Harris, manager of the Washington Ball Club, to Elizabeth Sutherland daughter of the alien property custodian, formerly United States senator from West Virginia.

The ceremony will be performed in the home of the bride. This romance has attracted more attention than has the marriage of any Washington debutante in the past decade.

The young player who twice piloted the Senators to the league championship and once to the world championship plans to take in the first two games of the world series at New York preliminary to a six-weeks honeymoon in Europe.

Harris' age was given as 29; Miss Sutherland's as 21.

Shot and killed in Leominster by Don C. Clark, the "other man," when her husband came home and found Clark there. Clark then committed suicide.

BURGLARS FLEE AT SHOTS

Returning to his store to turn out the lights, which he had forgotten, David J. Caldwell, proprietor of the Jackson, Caldwell & Co. furniture store in Union square, Somerville, found thugs breaking into the place and drove them away with revolver shots.

His wife, Mrs. Pearl Caldwell, prominent socially in Somerville, was calmly awaiting his return in their automobile parked outside the store when she heard the shots. She surmon t two policemen while her husband was firing out a rear window at the fleeing robbers.

Caldwell, on entering the office where the safe was located at the rear of the store, detected the men just raising the window after having sawed through two iron bars. He snatched his revolver from a nearby desk drawer and fired without warning. They darted away through the alley.

Patrolmen Walter Reed and [illegible] Sharry found a [illegible] hammer and hacksaw under the window. It is believed the thugs are the same ones who have knocked the combinations off a number of safes in Somerville stores recently.

GRIEVING MATE OF LOVE TRAGEDY VICTIM DROPS IN SWOON AT CASKET

Leominster, Oct. 1.---Constance Leger, husband of the woman slain in the Clark-Leger love tragedy, collapsed across the coffin today when the face of his wife was exposed.

The woman's son by a former marriage, Arthur Somes, going to the aid of his step-father, was himself overcome by grief at sight of his mother's face and the two men lay across the opened coffin until pitying hands removed them from the room.

Twice the stricken husband collapsed after this pitiful scene and physicians at last brought him consciousness.

MYSTERIOUS CALL TO AIMEE'S 'MA-IN-LAW'

Providence, Oct. 1.---Mrs. Annie McPherson, mother-in-law of Aimee Semple McPherson, accused Los Angeles evangelist, who was divorced here in 1921, said today that she had been summoned to the office of Attorney-General Sisson of Rhode Island.

Mystery surrounded the reason for this action as Mrs. McPherson said she had no inkling of what it was about, and the attorney-general denied having sent for her, adding that the State was not investigating the McPherson divorce.

An inquiry made at the State House revealed that there is no record of a marriage of Aimee to Harold McPherson, son of Mrs. Annie McPherson, in this State, although in divorce papers in Superior Court, the husband said they were married in Providence County, October 24, 1913.

Aimee McPherson was not in Rhode Island at the time her husband obtained his divorce on grounds of extreme cruelty, and the case was handled by Leonard W. Horton, who is now serving a jail sentence for complicity in the "divorce mill" scandal, in which divorces were illegally procured here.

Aimee wrote to her ex-husband, Harold McPherson, within the last

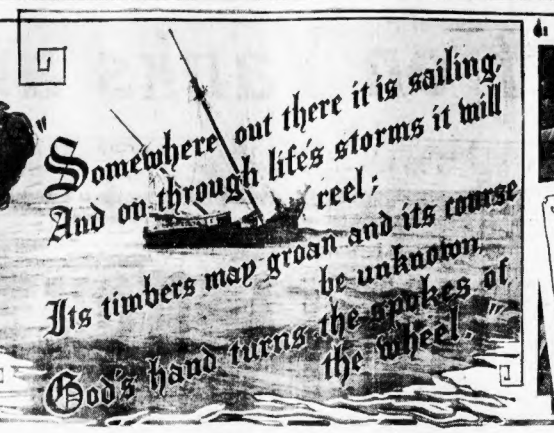
POETIC TRIANGLE SLAYER PENNED FATEFUL POEM AS TRAGEDY HOVERED OVER LEOMINSTER HOMES

(By Herald-Traveler-American Staff Photo)

TRAPPED IN HOME

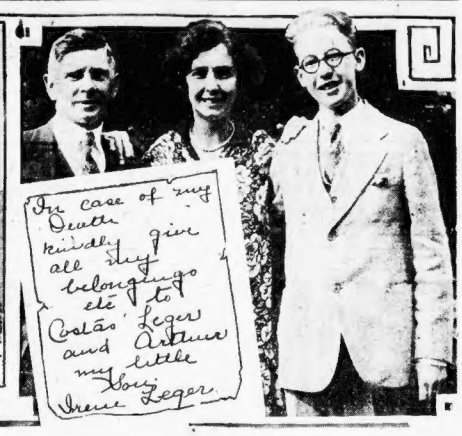
Unresponsive was Mrs. Leger when she opened the door to admit her husband, home on an unannounced visit. With her was Clark.



(Boston Evening American Staff Photos)

IN "DREAM SHIPS" CLARK WAS PROPHETIC

A few hours before the fates took their toll of two lives in this triangle, Don C. Clark penned the last of his love poems to Mrs. Leger. These poems were far from the standard of the amateur. In his last composition appears this line: "'Tis fate but collecting her dues." He proved himself dir ector of a cruel destiny.



BEFORE TRAGEDY HE ADED THEIR WAY

Don Clark and Mrs. Leger snapped with the latter's son, Arthur. Did the young mother fear her death was near? The insert shows a "will" found in the Leger home after Clark had shot his neighbor's wife and taken his own life while the husband stood nearby appalled.

Scorn Holy Vow and You Reap Sin's Wage

By REV. A. E. GEORGE

The Clark-Leger tragedy, which snuffed out the lives of an unfaithful man and an unfaithful woman, resulted from a worldly disregard for the sacredness of the marriage vows.

Marriage is a serious obligation and the safeguarding of the marriage relation is an obligation ten times more serious. Some men think they can get away with their sin, but they cannot. Sin will floor any man.

Love is the hardest thing in the world to manage. When it gets hold of some men it bewilders them, carries them off their feet without their normal control of reason. They get so they don't care.

They go ahead with their underhanded moves and motives. They play double and they say arrogantly that they can manage love.

No man and no woman ever managed love except that they first managed themselves. The sacred love of the marriage relation can only be controlled by spiritual means, and if a man lacks a conscience he finds it very easy "going to the devil."

Then he gets so mixed up with the tangle he has created that he does not know how to get out of it and in the end, pitifully, he resorts to the grim reaper as the only way to solve his problem and end his troubles.

A married man should not be so easily led by the fascination of some woman who does not care for him except in so far as she wins his affection from another woman and to glory in her deed. Some women frankly glory in what they can achieve in gaining a man's affections; they enjoy it because they are blind to the sin of it.

The moral is—stop at the beginning. Clarke went so far with his action that he could not stop. Be aware of temptation, but if tempted do not capitulate. It is one thing to be tempted, but another thing to fall.

Keep true to your wives, husbands. Husbands, love your wives. Thus saith the Bible, and it means this: With such love and care you will be saved trouble and anxiety in life.

"He that is in sin is in the possession of sin," wrote Emmanuel Swedenborg in connection with a case similar to this tragedy. "Every delight is shed into [illegible] saying can well be kept in one's mind as a warning, for it is true."

Sin steals itself. It creeps upon us. It charms us, blinds us, gets such control over us that we are not able to thrust it aside. Finally it gets us just where it wants to have us and it downs us.

But we are blind and do not realize it. We let it lead us along to destruction because we do not see the danger we are approaching. That danger often comes with terrifying suddenness as it did to Don Clark and Mrs. Leger.

Clark must have known in his own mind again and again that he was doing wrong. Mrs. Leger, like many other women, susceptible to a man's attentions, doubtless did not realize the harm that might come of it, but she, too, must have known what everybody ought to know—that it is wrong to tamper with the married life of others.

HUSBAND, SON, COLLAPSE AT SLAIN WIFE'S BIER

HYPNOTIC BOND.

A hypnotic bond, Clark's parents call it. It quited him to a woman he lived in fear of, dreaded, even hated. It held him bound to her in a thraldom from which he could not break away. It left him mutilated and physically broken and in desperation he ended it all with the only sure remedy he could find, relief or death.

If the telegram had been answered speedily the tragedy might have been averted, two lives might have been spared and two broken homes restored to normalcy.

But Mrs. Clark could not confide to a telegraph wire what was in her heart when the pitiful appeal for forgiveness came. To the secrecy of a letter and the slower mails she sent her answer to the telegram.

The message arrived too late. A day of waiting without an answer convinced Clark that he had ventured beyond the bounds too far for reconciliation was out of question, and in desperation he returned to the Leger home, where he had tried in vain to escape, to the woman who a few hours before he had wired that he was through, but it was over between them—Mrs. Leger.

SENT 2 TELEGRAMS.

From the home of his father, Carl W. Clark in Burlington, Vt., whither he had fled to regain control of himself and break the spell, Don Clark sent two telegrams, one to his wife, the other to Mrs. Leger.

The first begged forgiveness, asked for reconciliation and pleaded with her to come to Burlington to help him master he strange infatuation. To his father he had said: "I love Alice, if she would only come to me, forget me and effect a reconciliation, I know I could forget the other woman."

To Mrs. Leger he was brutally bitter. He blamed her for ruining his life. This telegram read: "I am through. I never want to see you again. You have ruined my life." Yet, in a few hours, he was back at her feet, the strange spell upon him again and basking in her favor.

Mrs. Clark knew of the strange bond that held the two inseparable, her husband had confessed to her and then tried to break away by giving up his position, going to Canada and then coming about, always trying to forget.

The talk we great and finally he wired his father telling him that his mind was going. The parent hurried, quickly and ordered him by telegram to go to Burlington. He got there Saturday, broken in spirit and mind, morbid and depressed.

The elder Clark said his son was a man of high ideals and character, becoming the unwitting and unwilling dupe or an exterior hypnotist.

stricken area, the check being mailed by our mayor this (Thursday) to the mayor of Miami and Friend of Red Cross.

"Tonight our mayor showed me printed circulars signed by the mayor under date September 21 saying he was convinced a very exaggerated idea of Miami's real conditions has been over-cast; that there has been a hurricane and some cheaply constructed houses blown down and some floating boats lost. The damage not so great as that Miami would not be open to welcome visitors as usual this Winter.

"The sentiment of gratitude or real need seems entirely lacking from the picture. The mayor of Richmond was considering cancelling the check on account of the criticism if we felt justified in accepting further contributions after reading Miami letter. We received $1,000 from Retail Merchants Association this evening, but will not deposit until we receive your positive instructions."

Vice-Chairman Felser, in a report to headquarters today, said Florida relief work had been retarded by perverted reports that the need as set forth by his organization did not exist, and that an impression had been disseminated that the wealthy class rather than the wage-earners was hit. This, he said, was contrary to facts.

Leger's Last Letter to Wife Breathes Love

Leominster, Oct. 1.—The last letter written by Constantine Leger to his wife, Irene, breathed solicitude for her health and expressed hope of a speedy and happy reunion.

This letter could hardly have been in the hands of Mrs. Irene Leger when the husband was on his way home—there to meet tragedy and the snuffing out of two lives.

This letter, and another to his son, follow:

"Dear Irene: Just a few lines after calling you on the phone to send you little money as according to what you said you are in need. I will see tomorrow in your letter what you have done about yourself as I couldn't hear you well on the phone and I couldn't speak myself very loud as people they were outside—but I think I heard you saying you are feeling little better, how you were in bed for three days, perhaps you were very sick. But I hope you are better now.

MUSTARD BURNED.

"As I wrote you in one my previous letters if you want you can come to North Adams and we can find some good doctor there to see what is the trouble and perhaps he give you some medicine to make you feeling better. As for me I never forget the day before yesterday, I got some pills.

"Also I put some mustard plaster on my chest just above to my left breast and believe me, almost took flesh out—I mean burn me—but today I feel little better and as soon as I go to bed I will put another one. But as I told you, I had pains in my gums and I couldn't chew even. I could drink water and this after-noon I went to some dentist, but he was not there as he was coming home around 3:45 p. m. and I couldn't stay.

TO SEE DOCTOR.

"I went tonight 9:35 p. m., and he took out the filling of one of my back teeth in the left, and tomorrow he will treat it. If you think you can come up here better get something from B. and S. to have home and you can tell Arthur to put it in the ice box, or if you have enough prepared till you go back. But come if you feel better.

"I will try to mail this letter to-morrow morning and perhaps you will get it tomorrow noon sometime. I got the receipt from Osgood in full. If you come with me at once to call Mr. Abdoulis to recommend me to some good doctor as he knows North Adams I think well.

"It is little cool up here tonight and it was rain little bit this morning. I told you above to let me know right away as I have to fix somehow to make time to go to North Adams as you know in this afternoon it is not time enough and especially now when I am without vegetable cook.

"Hoping this find you much better, also glad to hear the children are well.

"P. S.—Beside the check I enclose $1 bill; give twenty-five to each child and spend fifty cents for yourself."

Forsaken Husband's Letter to Stepson Shows Love for Wife

Leominster, Oct. 1.—Following is a letter recently written by Constantine Leger to his stepson, Arthur Gleason, showing his affection for the wife who betrayed him as well as for her offspring by an earlier marriage:

. . . . . .

"My Dear Boy,

"I am glad to assure you didn't lose the dime as I told you about it and just for good luck enclosed you will find a dime. Also enclosed one dollar which give to mama to have it in her pocket.

"As I told on the phone and I wrote to mamma I will try to send for mamma the money as much as you need. But if mamma she will find a reasonable nice clothes for you instead of buy much as will buy nice suit clothes and when I will come down I will buy suit of pants. But that is up to mamma if she wants. If not it is up to her and tell mamma to write me and let me know yourself—Few lines once in a while.

"Kiss mamma for me and hug her for me. With kiss to you—

from father.

"P. S. (to mamma)

"Lovey: As I was happy and still I am, I forgot you in the other letter that last night came to the hotel Mr. Harding from S. S. Pierce whom I know. He told me to write for a clerk's position to work in the Haunt-Intervale, N. H., for the Forest Pine Inn, Somerville, South Carolina—Five months season and good money. I wrote to him last night and I hope I will have a good answer. But any slip I do will let you know. I wrote also to Mr. Edward Fitzgerald for the Carolina Hotel—Good season—Does over $2,000 wages for the chef—So Harding put me wise for it—but I have confidence in Mr. Bolton the same time.

"I hope again you are all well. I kiss both of you with love and hugs.

"Hubby and Father."

PROBE STORY THAT DEMPSEY WAS POISONED

neither physically or mentally fit to enter the ring, his close friends declared.

Dempsey would not comment on the poison episode but said: "I have no alibis and no excuses for my defeat. But I should say I would be criticised as belittling Tunney's victory and that is something I would not do."

TUNNEY BETS LATE.

In connection with the poison reports it is pointed out that none of the big bets which were made on Tunney were placed until six on the evening of the battle and after word had come from Atlantic City that Dempsey was in no condition to enter the ring.

Lots of things are beginning to be talked here, things that were not reported before because Dempsey swore all his associates in Atlantic City to secrecy.

Close friends are now revealing, however, that hours before the fight Dempsey was advised by his physician to call off the battle.

They also say that four days before the encounter Dempsey was seized with severe vomiting spells and violent abdominal cramps after breakfast.

TRAINER ALSO ILL.

Jerry the Greek, his adviser and trainer, fell ill at the same time.

On the same day Captain Charles J. Mabbutt head of the Dempsey training camp, suffered severe abdominal pains and was kept under a doctor's care for several days, and then rushed to Walter Reed Hospital at Washington. A poison rash has since broken out over his body.

In addition to all this Dempsey was subjected to a great deal of mental anguish.

He was chased into the Jersey meadows to hide for hours to dodge a body attachment a few days before the battle.

The day before the fight he received a message that his wife was in danger of being killed by a Chicago gunman. He was also informed that plans were made to "bump him off" before he entered the ring.

Was Dempsey poisoned? Were all these things links in a conspiracy to defeat him?

year, according to her former mother-in-law. The elder Mrs. McPherson said that she believed Aimee was sorry that Harold divorced her and still loved him because he was a good husband.

Joseph E. Johnson, who lives in the small gray dwelling in which was once the Church o f the First Born, said he heard Aimee in the pulpit there and understood she belonged to the "Holy Jumpers" and was a faith healer.

"Though she appeared earnest enough on the platform before her audience, it was all very shallow," said ohnson. "She didn't strike me as being a sincere woman. People would go to church looking for a frolic and, although she specialized in faith-healing, she conducted meetings that resembled camp meetings.

"In spite of the fun that some made of her, she really had a large following and made money."

"More sinned against than sinning" was the characterization of the woman evangelist that was made today by a noted woman preacher of this city, Mrs. Christine Benson, who staunchly defends Mrs. McPherson.

Mrs. Gibson, declaring she knew that sinister motives prompt Mrs. McPherson in her evangelism, said she believes implicitly in the story told by the evangelist.

During the time of her evangelistic wor" here at the beginning of her gospel career had before she was divorced in this State for cruelty, Mrs. McPherson at times accepted invitations to occupy the pulpit at the Church of the First Born, where Rev. Reuben A. Gibson, husband of Mrs. Christine Gibson, was pastor.

Mrs. Gibson now conducts Faith Home, an institution where she takes care of fourteen boys and girls. Recalling days when she accompanied Mrs. McPherson on camp meeting tours in the Cape Cod district of Massachusetts, she said emphatically that she has always considered the accused woman a "sincere, honest, devout Christian woman serving God in the fields of a pentecostal evangelist."

"It was ten years ago my late husband, the Rev. Mr. Gibson, and I first became acquainted with Mrs. McPherson," said Mrs. Gibson. "She became a regular attendant and we became very friendly. We assisted her in plans for revivals at Onset, where she charmed thousands by pleas for right thinking and clean living.

"She preached at revivals in Cape Cod. Mr. husband and I joined her there. There was never a breath of scandal connected with her name.

"Later in England in a nation-wide campaign in Philidelphia, where she conferred with ministers from all parts of the country.

"I knew Mr. McPherson, her husband very well. They didn't get along very well. He was moderate and congenial in social life. I don't know very much about home life.

"If Mrs. McPherson says she was kidnaped, I believe her. I don't know why she should lie."

Mrs. Christine Benson, of the Volunteers of America, who knew the young evange" l intimately and how Aimee rose to prominence at her camp meetings in New York avenue, Saco, Providence, told how she was asked to preach in the Church of the First Born, in South Broadway.

"I knew Mrs. McPherson very well," said Mrs. Benson.

"She was well known as a Pentecostal preacher. I recall having heard her preach at camp meetings in East Providence. Mrs. Christine Gibson, pastor of the Church of the First Born in East Providence, had Mrs. McPherson preach in the church, when the latter was conducting a revival in her camp off Eddy street. Mrs. McPherson was a sincere and devout Christian woman."

Providence officials of the Salvation Army denied Mrs. McPherson had ever been connected with that organization. Albert Baldwin, in charge of the Providence Corps, and Lieutenant Betty Comstock, went over the books but could find no record relative to Mrs. McPherson.

BALLOTS IN HUB FIGHT MISSING

Clerks Face Grill in O'Brien-Keene Case; 175 Votes Are Recounted

At recess today 175 ballots had been identified in the recount hearing before Auditor J. J. Ronan at the courthouse on petitions of Thomas C. O'Brien and Charles G. Keene, candidates for the Republican nomination for district attorney of Suffolk County.

Two ballots were missing when called for by Assistant District Attorney Georges Alpert, representing District Attorney O'Brien. It is expected the clerks who handled the blocks in which the missing ballots should have been, will be called to

As a result of a petition for a writ of mandamus filed by Candidate Keene in Supreme Court, contested Revere ballots were taken to the hearing room at the courthouse.

In consequence City Solicitor John DiP ia of Revere joined Assistant District Attorney Alpert; Asst. Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, for the election commissioners, and Attorney Elijah Adlow for Keene.

Chelsea contested ballots were to be brought in later, and in view of the dragging proceedings and refusal of election commissioners to agree to night sessions, it appeared the hearing will continue for several days.

Auditor Ronan today ordered William A. Mahoney, executive clerk of the Election Commission, who is handling the ballots, to make responsive answers.

Attorney Adlow had protested that Mahoney failed to state definitely whether or not a ballot could be found.

ARMY WILL AID BOY THROUGH HARVARD

The mother who said "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier" will wish that she had, for it is now possible for students to work their way through college by doing military service in return for which the college men will receive tuition.

The plan, recently proposed by Hanford McNider, Assistant Secretary of War, met with enthusiastic response at Harvard. Colonel Browning, commanding officer of the Harvard Military Science Department, stated in an interview: "It will prove especially valuable in any national emergency when trained men are essential for war organization.

The program has not been completed yet, but the War Department expects to form juniors, who are working their way, into a unit called the "Minute Battalion." The men will go into Summer training of much the same style as was affected at Plattsburg during the war. The instructors will be selected graduates of the Army Industrial College and of the Harvard Business School.

The army officials point out that they will save money on the college-soldier plan inasmuch as the cost of upkeep of an army private is the same over a period of two years, and that the students will be better fitted o aid he nalon in time of trouble.

BIG LIQUOR SEIZURE ON FARM AT RAYNHAM

Taunton, Oct. 1.—Inspector Owen P. McKenna and a number of agents from the office of Collector Lufkin of Boston paid a visit to the farm conducted by Thomas H. Kearns in Raynham where they seized 300 gallons of alcohol, 30 gallons of Islay, and 100 bottles of assorted liquor.

The agents acted under the authority of a warrant seeking smug-

FIREMEN SAVE TOTS PLAYING WITH MATCH

Proximity of a fire station to their home, and alertness of a fireman, saved Tony Greco, 16 months old, and his sister, Mary, 3, today, when they were snatched from a burning bed in the attic of their home at No. 170 Pearl street, Malden, and carried to safety. Matches with which the children were playing set fire to the bed.

Fireman Timothy S. Buckley, attached to the Edgeworth station, next door, saw smoke billowing from the attic windows while he was repairing an alarm box in front of the station. He called Lieut. Philip McCarthy, forced the front door, and rushed to the smoke-filled attic. Covering the children's heads, he carried them to safety.

The mother, Mrs. Victoria Greco, was busy with housework on the second floor and did not know of the danger until the door was forced. Chemicals extinguished the blaze.

NAME NEW HALL CASE WOMEN

Other Arrests Loom as Dickman Bares the Bribe; Detectives Verify Startling Story

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 1.—Two women who are expected to prove the State's most important witnesses in the Hall-Mills murder trials were named by Henry L. Dickman, former State trooper, in his statement to the authorities, it was reported today.

Neither woman had ever been mentioned in connection with the case before. Both are said to have been in DeHussey's lane on Sept. 14, 1922, and to have witnessed the slaying of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and his inamorata, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," who identified three of the four defendants charged with the crime, as having been at the scene, has been regarded as the State's most important witness. The two new women mentioned by Dickman are said to be able to tell more startling stories than Mrs. Gibson.

SLEUTHS VERIFY STORY.

A new murder arrest will be made in the mystery, it was admitted today by Patrick Hayes, chief investigator for State Senator Alexander Simpson, assistant attorney-General, in charge of the prosecution.

Two angles of Dickman's amazing story are said to have been verified by detectives working under Inspector John J. Underwood of the Jersey City police department.

Dickman is also said to have told of a man and woman of Lavallette, who saw Henry Stevens, one of the four defendants, driving his wife's car on the road to New Brunswick at about 6 o'clock on the night of the murder. That despite the fact that Sevens suied four years ago he could no drive a gear shift car.

A Lexsellette garage man is said to haves ben found by Dickerman in his lone investigation of the murders four years ago, who said the speedometer of Mrs. Stevens' car on the day following the murders showed the machine had traveled as far as to New Brunswick and back.

One theory of the State has been that "Willie" Stevens learned the Rev. Mr. Hall had a rendezvous with Mrs. Mills at DeRusseys' lane on the fatal night and telephoned his brother Henry. It is believed "Willie" met Henry on the outskirts of the city and both went to the scene.

Investigators, believed to be working on Dickman's story, visited the home of a woman in Benson street, New Brunswick, today. Reporters questioned the woman after the detectives had departed, but she denied having been interviewed.

Investigators questioned a man whose name they refused to disclose, and later paid another visit to the home of Mrs. Gibson.

Details of how the "shadow" paid him a huge bribe to drop his investigation of the murders just when he had solved the mystery were bared by Dickman.

New and surprising arrests are momentarily expected as a result of Dickman's confession.

Dickman declared the "shadow," whose name he never learned, kept him guarded constantly until he could leave the State under threat of death.

DAUGHERTY IS CLEARED BY SEN. GOFF

New York, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—Complete responsibility as far as the Attorney-General's office went, for the release of $7,000,000 of shares of the American Metal Company was assumed by Senator Guy D. Goff, testifying in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial today.

Called as the second defense witness, he replied to questions by Max D. Steuer, counsel for H. M. Daugherty, Attorney-General in President Harding's Cabinet, that he had never taken the matter of the metal claims up with Daugherty, but had allowed them by his own authority.

Q.—Were you in complete charge of alien property matters in Daugherty's office? A.—I was.

Q.—Were you accustomed to refer such matters for final decision to Daugherty after you yourself had reached a conclusion? A.—I was not.

TAKES RESPONSIBILITY.

Q.—In the specific instance of these metal claims, did you confer with Daugherty before signing the release? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did Daugherty ever in any way discuss this matter with you, or seek to influence your independent conclusion? A.—He did not.

Q.—Were you ever approached in person or by writing in an effort to influence you by Jesse Smith or John T. Knight? A.—I was not.

The government resumed its attack upon the testimony of George E. Williams, first witness for the defense in the case.

Williams, managing director for Thomas W. Miller as alien property custodian, had previously testified he considered valid the claim Richard Merton, German metal magnate, made for $7,000,000 of impounded American Metal Company shares.

He also said Miller had had nothing to do with payment of the claim for which John T. King, Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, received "commissions" of $441,000, part of which was traced to bank and brokerage accounts of Miller and Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney-General at the time of the transaction.

The defenses of Miller and Daugherty are being made separately.

The government attempted to break down the testimony of Williams that he had not met Merton in April, 1921. Merton has testified Williams had told him in April, 1921, the proper way for him to file the Swiss Society claims.

papermen and friends from photographs, a signet ring and papers in his wallet.

Mrs. Williams said that on leaving home about 3 p. m. yesterday her husband told her he was going to the Bohemian Club with some friends for dinner. She said he telephoned her at 9 o'clock last night that he was having "a wonderful time" and that he would not be home until an early hour in the morning.

She said that when her husband was out late he usually drove home by way of the Embarcadero, as it was well lighted and he was not well acquainted with the city's streets.

She believes he must have lost control of the car or that his vision was obstructed by something causing the car to plunge into the bay.

Colonel Williams was in charge of recruiting for the Marine Corps in the western recruiting district. He was transferred to San Francisco from San Diego last Spring after he had been convicted of "drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an officer" at a navy court-martial.

MAN, 79, STRUCK BY ENGINE, WALKS HOME

Taken to the Relief Hospital, the old man listened while the doctors diagnosed his injuries as a laceration of the left ear, contusions and abrasions of the nose and head, but when they applied a technical term for a nasal hemorrhage, it was too much and he walked out.

WARD, MISSING BAKERY HEIR, SEEN IN N. Y.

New York, Oct. 1 (I.N.S.).—Walter Ward, mysteriously missing for months, has returned to New York, and is in hiding in Harlem, according the latest reports.

The ubiquitous Ward, who is the son of the millionaire baker, recently has been reported in several places. A few days ago he was reported on the Pacific Coast, where he was said to have disguised himself by wearing shell-rimmed glasses and dyeing his hair.

Today, however, Policeman Joseph Windham reported he saw Ward eating breakfast in a Broadway restaurant.

"I know you—you're Walter Ward," Windham said.

The man launched into a general denial of reports concerning Ward, without admitting his identity, Windham said.

"I never disappeared at all," the man said, according to the policeman, "I've been in New York all the time."

Windham said Ward's car which he recognized, was at the curb. The man left in his car.

A New York Evening Journal reporter saw Ward today in his car in company of another man.

The return of Ward has revived curiosity along Broadway as to the reason for his mysterious disappearance early in May, when his automobile was found in Trenton N. J., with the glass windshield shattered. Ward was given considerable publicity in connection with the slaying of Clarence Peters, a sailor.

RUNAWAY SCARE IN TREMONT ST.

Shoppers in the vicinity of Tremont and Park streets were frightened today and several narrowly escaped injury when a runaway horse made a mad dash which ended when the wagon it was drawing crashed into a parked automobile on Winter street.

Driven by Frank J. Hickey of No. 51 Wells Hill street, Forest Hills, who was accompanied by Joseph Terona of Pope street, East Boston, the horse became frightened on Park street and bolted.

It tore down the hill to Tremont street, with the driver tugging at the reins. Traffic Officer J. J. Gilman, on duty at the crossing, made an attempt to stop the frightened animal, but the horse eluded him.

Scattering pedestrians on the crossings, the horse swung into Winter street and anchored itself when the wagon crashed into a big sedan. Before the animal could make a new start, John J. Samuel of No. 23 Temple street, West End, seized the check rein.

CARES FOR BODY OF WIFE WHO BLAMED HIM

Caring for the body of the wife who blamed him for her suicide was the sad duty of James Cowdin of Brighton today. Mrs. Florence Conantson ended her life by carbolic acid in the office of Dr. Harry D. Glynn, Everett dentist.

The young woman, who gave her name to Dr. Glynn as "Arlene Dale," had come to his office and sought treatment. Later she said she had no place to spend the night and the dentist allowed her to stay in his office.

Last night she pressed a paper into his hands and said she had taken poison. Then she died. Dr. Harry Bass, who ordered her removal to the Whidden Hospital, where she died.

The note read: "Dear Jim—It is hard to live and go straight. It is all your fault and not mine. There is no one else to blame."

Today, after an autopsy, Medical Examiner Thomas M. Durell said that death had been suicidal and that carbolic acid was the poison used. The stomach and intestines were badly burned.

JOHN D.'S KIN BACK ON HIS 'PHONE' JOB

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 1 (A.P.)—John Rockefeller Prentice, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, junior at Yale College, looks forward to two more years at college with an independence which comes from earning one's way to a diploma from the second oldest university in the land.

Mr. Prentice has already begun his courses with his class, and at night is again at the switchboard of the New Haven Hospital as operator. He returned a week ago from his Summer vacation, and slipped into the telephone switchboard routine without even the intimate acquaintances here knowing of it.

He said today that he thought the job would last out as long as his college term, and he saw no reason to believe that he would desert it before a diploma came his way.

Mr. Prentice laughed when an inquiry was made as to his employment, saying that he couldn't see why anyone should be a bit interested. I tube fact that he put in time at night earning a penny while he was studying, allowing him to use his days to full advantage in other ways.

Holyoke Clears Street for Sallies

Holyoke, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—The Lynn plan of barring the Salvation Army from the use of the streets for the farthest does for practice here.

The local branch has been in the habit of holding its open air meetings on a corner in the business district. The increase of automobile traffic has seriously interfered with this activity.

The army on reaching is chosen spot has often found it preempted by cars.

Today the municipal authorities placed "No parking" signs at that spot, thus in effect reserving it for the use of the army.

GARDEN ARTIST HELD INSANE

Wayne C. Holsworth, Cambridge landscape artist, who was sentenced to thirty days in jail for contempt when he flourished a revolver in Dedham court, was today committed to the Medfield State Hospital for the Insane.

Commitment was made on recommendation of the staff of the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, where Holsworth was sent for observation after sentence was imposed.

Holsworth drew a revolver while Judge Joseph H. McGlynn was hearing his motion for modification of a decree which gave his wife, Doris, permanent custody of their two children.

"MISSING LINK" SKULL IS FURTHER DESCRIBED

Batavia, Java, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—Dr. C. J. Herberlein today gave further details for the fossilized skull recently found in the interior of Java, similar to the famous "missing link" relic unearthed by Prof. Eugene Du bois in the same district in 1892.

Dr. Heberlein says his discovery consists of a spongy stone lump of volcanic origin, on which is visible a layer presumed, but not yet proved, to be the remainder of the skull's bony substance. The crown is somewhat distorted and the eyesockets stand out abnormally.

MOVE TO OFFSET PACT FORMED AT THOIRY

London, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—A move to offset the recent concord reached between France and Germany and possibly the effects of the newly formed army alliance of Western European States is seen by some of the European commentators on the meeting between Sir Austen Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini.

Neither Great Britain, Italy nor the United States is a member of the combine, the announced purpose of which is to end competition within the ranks of its members.

OF IMPORTANCE.

The Giornale d'Italia, one of Rome's most prominent newspapers, goes so far as to characterize the meeting between Sir Austen and Signor Mussolini as being equal in importance to that of the French and German Foreign Ministers, M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann at Thoiry.

Above it was agreed by them to forget the past and work for complete harmony.

The extreme Fascist organ, the Rome L'Impero, thinks the Lechorn conference, at which it was officially announced the most important international problems of the day were discussed and the intimate relations of Italy and Great Britain confirmed, "means Rome and London are two names which make people think and hope."

NO ALARM FELT.

The Rome Lavoro Italia asserts that the meeting at Lechorn should cause no alarm in Paris and Berlin, because if France and Germany desire peace Italy and Great Britain will be glad to co-operate.

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, is hopeful that great success will follow the Western European steel consortium. In voicing what seems to be the sentiment of most of the steel officials in the United States, Mr. Gary said:

"I think its managers will be friendly toward American interests, and the sentiment will certainly be reciprocated by the steel interests in America."

LONDON'S BOB-HAIR BANDIT IS TRACED

London, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—The mysterious bobbed-hair bandit, who has baffled Scotland Yard for the last two months, has been traced to the neighborhood of the Elephant and Castle, a famous public house on the south bank of the Thames.

The latest crime attributed to this female "Raffles" is he robbery of a flat in Goden Green. She obtained a fur coat and leather dressing case, valued at $2,500.

Autoists Are Happy

San Francisco, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—A general gasoline "price war" was in effect on the Pacific Coast today as the result of four-cent a gallon cuts by five large companies to meet independent competition.

OSTRICH GOWN IS WORTH A QUEEN'S CROWN

FINE FEATHERS ADD TO DANCE CHARM

Eleanore Ambrose, wife of Maurice, the famous dancer, is shown here in her ostrich dancing costume, said to be worth a princess' ransom. She is from Kansas City, worth a million, and loves the plaudits of the multitude so much she dances to win applause. She and Maurice are to tour the country.

ROLLING PINS NOTHING TO WIFE'S 'BILLY'; HE QUITS

Various implements of torture have been exhibited by divorce case principals, but it remained for Clifford Thomas Coleman to display in Suffolk Probate Court today the strangest of all, a combination of a baseball bat and a policeman's night stick.

"She just raised Cain," said Clifford, who is seeking a divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

"What effects did these threats with the billy have upon your health?" he was asked.

"I just got disgusted and down hearted," replied Clifford. "I couldn't sleep. I was afraid to go to sleep when she said she'd knock my head off."

Clifford added that his wife, Gladys, also threatened to cut him with a knife and once threw a shoe at him.

Mrs. Coleman denied all charges. The court took the matter under advisement.

NAVY AIRPLANE NEAR WRECK IN JUNGLE

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 1. (A.P.)—Engine trouble in an airplane hundreds of miles inland above the head hunting tribes in the jungles of Columbia was among the experiences encountered by naval personnel engaged this Summer in obtaining data for the United States Hydrographic Serice Charts, it was learned today from nine members of the group who returned aboard the U. S. S. Vega.

Hasty work by a mechanic kept nine of the engine's twelve cylinders firing until the pilot was able to return to this base with his two passengers.

PROTESTS TO LEAGUE ON SHOOTING OF GERMANS

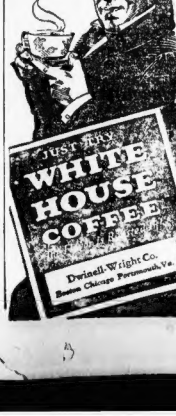
Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—The mayor of Germarsh, in the German palatinate, has protested to the League of Nations against the recent incident in which three Germans were shot, one fatally, by a French officer.

The incident, the mayor said, demonstrated the necessity for immediate evacuation of the palatinate by French troops. He demanded that the league appoint a commission to investigate the shooting.

Sir Eric Drummond, league secretary-general, is acknowledging receipt of the communication, but it is announced the league cannot take official action, as it is authorized to receive protests only from governments and not municipalities.

CHINESE LACE MUST NOT BEAR ERIN'S MARK

Washington, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—Lace imported from China cannot be designated as "Irish," in the opinion of the Federal Trade Commission, Nanyang Bros. of New York have been ordered in a "cease and desist" order to discontinue labeling its Oriental lace importations with the mark of Erin.



PRICES LOWER, 'TIS SAID, BUT IT'S ON FARM

Washington, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—The fall in the price of cotton, wheat and fruits, the Department of Agriculture announced today, brought the general index of purchasing power of farm products down from 93 in August, 1925, to 82 this August, the lowest point in twenty-six months.

While the whole price level has been falling, the department said in its October report, farm products prices have declined faster.

Of the four chief money crops, cotton, wheat and fruits were described as large enough to "depress prices somewhat, notwithstanding the low yield of Spring wheat."

"Potatoes, on the other hand," the department said, "are neither a large acreage nor have early diggings turned out very good yields, so prices remain relatively strong."

The report added that the total acreage of twenty-one cultivated crops was about 2 per cent. above that harvested last year.

CIVILIANS DYING AS CHINESE ARMIES FIGHT

Hankow, China, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—The civilian population of Wuchang across the Yangtze river from here, is entirely without food and hundreds are reported to be dying. Colder weather is increasing the suffering. There is no coal and no firewood and the nearby remaining food supply is held entirely by the military. The condition is the result of the siege laid to the city by the "red" Cantonese forces to force surrender of the northern troops holding it.

IN AGAIN AND OUT AGAIN ROLE IS A FAILURE

Nicholas Di Stasio, the Finnegan of prisoners, is in again.

Di Stasio, who lives in Edward place, Medford, was arrested for breaking and entering in that city a few weeks ago. But he twice eluded his captors before he was locked up. Then when Chief Welch took him to Malden Court he thought Nick was safely locked in the prisoner's dock. When the name "Di Stasio" was called it was discovered that Nick was gone again.

Today, however, Motorcycle Officer O'Connell of the Somerville police saw Nick on Broadway and took him after a long chase. Before Judge Sturtevant the Medford Houdini pleaded not guilty to two charges of larceny. He was held in $5,000 bail, and this time the Medford police, too, will be on hand.

The Somerville offenses charged to the disappearing Medford man are larceny of $41.52 from John Dixon, proprietor of a filling station on Mystic avenue, and the larceny of the watch of Charles F. Hoeser of No. 32 Bond street.

U. S. DRY LAW AND HIGH WAGES PUZZLE BISHOP

Ames Ia., Oct. 1 (A.P.).—The Right Rev. Foley Winnington Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, cannot understand how the prohibition law was passed in the United States, he said in addressing the students of Iowa State College today at the outset of a six weeks' tour of American universities, also expressed his perplexity over several other conditions in this country. He cannot understand how such high wages are paid and yet bring the owners so large a return. Neither can he discern the difference between a Republican and a Democrat.

OUST ACCUSED POLICEMAN IN WAKEFIELD

Patrolman Hardy F. Russell was ordered dismissed from the Wakefield police department following a stormy session which found 1,500 persons crowded into Wakefield Town Hall until nearly 2 o'clock this morning, and the Board of Selectmen in executive session for hours afterward.

The dismissal was the result of a series of charges involving intoxication, assault and battery, use of violent language and disturbance of the peace.

The charges grew out of the affair of Salvatore Rossetti on Aug. 28. He said Patrolman Russell and John Fay of Reading met in the home of Rudolph Morris in Wakefield and left with them in an automobile. When he wished to get out, he said, he was pushed from the machine and then jumped upon and stabbed.

Russell's testimony admitted going to the Morris home and meeting Rossetti there. He acknowledged having taken a glass and a half of wine, but said Rossetti was drunk. Later he picked Rossetti up to take him home. He added that he placed Rossetti under arrest for drunkenness when he charged Rossetti with starting a disturbance.

William F. Young, a former police officer repeated, at the request of the Board of Selectmen, the profanity he said he heard Russell use.

Costs $200 to Pose as First-Class Passenger

Southampton, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—It cost a young man arriving on one of the big Atlantic liners 40 pounds (about $200 to pose as a first-class passenger.

He slept in his third-class accommodations, but each evening, dressed in dinner clothes and wearing a monocle, ate in the first-class dining room.

He made the acquaintance of a woman there and invited her to dine with him one evening. While fancy dress at table a steward presented the man what appeared to be a useless envelope.

It was really a note calling him to the purser's office, where he was given the choice of paying 40 pounds additional or being turned over to the police. He paid the 40 pounds.

SUZANNE EAGER TO HURRY TO BOSTON

By ELEANOR EARLY
Staff Correspondent of the Boston Evening American.

New York, Oct. 1.—Suzanne Lenglen, like an actress after a first night, had coffee and the papers in bed this morning. Armed with scissors she attacked them with confusion glee, clipping every line that was written about her.

Suzanne's coming-out party, given last night by C. C. Pyle, was all that a coming-out party should be, plus a few innovations by Pyle. The British film star went over with a bang. So did Mary K. Brown and Vincent Richards.

The really dramatic moment of the evening was when Vin and his pretty wife descended the stairs, arm in arm, to the dining saloon.

For a moment they stood quietly on the landing, while Pyle with his flair for the theatrical, made the announcement that young Richards had turned Pro.

POSE FOR PICTURES.

Then Pyle with his proteges—Suzanne and Mary and Vin, with Paul Feret, the little French professional, posed for pictures. Suzanne stood on one side of the promoter and Miss Brown on the other. Suzanne in a cloak of copper colored velvet trimmed with baby lamb and orchids on her shoulder. Mary in a wrap of crimson.

Suzanne wore her celebrated pearls and Miss Brown a girlish necklace.

Suzanne's lips wer red as a bleeding wound and her face ashen. They looked like vamp and ingenue.

Mama Lenglen, a buxom edition of Suzanne, beamed her approval and chattered in explosive French. Then the girls played an exhibition match of ping pong, while the fun-loving contingent took in every detail of Suzanne's exquisite Paris frock.

DIVIDE HONORS.

Mademoiselle, by the way, has fifty-six gowns with her. They are to be displayed next week in a smart Boston shop on Tremont street, as the last word from Paris.

Suzanne seems very nervous. She laughs a great deal—a breathless little laugh. Her figure is wonderful and her unconscious posturings are very lovely.

After the ping pong match, Texas Guinan, in jade green chiffon trimmed with pink tulle, mounted a table and did her stuff. After paying her respects to Suzanne, Texas introduced her girls, who proceeded to entertain.

"Big Bill" Edwards was toastmaster. Suzanne and Miss Brown rather divided honors. And Vincent Richards, very shy and boyish, seemed conscience-stricken up to the very last.

But why, as Suzanne demands, "is it wrong to earn money?"

On October 16th she will play at the Arena in Boston.

"And I'm going to see every historic spot in town," she declares. "I'll read up first on American history, and I'll bet I won't miss a thing. Concord, Lexington, Bunker Hill, the Old South Church, I get excited thinking about them. I'm dying to go to Boston. I love New England."

Suzanne had a lump in her throat and her knees wobbled when Mr. Pyle had phoned to the party—and Suzanne, in despair, tore her boyish bob.

It was in her suite at the Vanderbilt.

"Mon Dieu", cried Suzanne, "but I am frightened, like the big scare cat. I will die. I cannot make the speech. I have the paralytic."

She clutched her heart like a tragedy queen. "Honest—feel. It flutters." Suzanne is naive. She may be temperamental, but she isn't hard boiled.

VERY HAPPY.

"Oh, it's wonderful, being here," she exclaimed. "Not a bit like last time, when I was sick and everything was wretched. I am going to Canada and Mexico and Hollywood, and I am so happy."

She raved like a school girl, and Suzanne, when she raves, is very charming. Her photographs do not do her justice. The camera faithfully immortalizes her rather large nose, but it does not catch the spark of her vivacity—and that is the really nice thing about her—that and her pretty accent, and breathless little way of talking and laughing all at once.

Then too, Suzanne dresses like the Ritzy ads. For dinner she changed from a flowered blue georgette to a bisque crepe, beaded in gold with a beaded girdle of Persian shades. She took off her rings of diamonds and sapphires and substituted a single large pearl. "I haven't many jewels," she explained. "Only my pearls and one set of jade ear rings and a necklace and a ring with a jade arrow to wear on my shoulder. And then only these sapphires and diamonds." On her little finger she wore a platinum band reaching to her knuckle set with countless diamonds and one huge sapphire.

EAGER TO SEE BUNKER HILL

Suzanne Lenglen (at right), with her mother, photographed while strolling in Central Park, New York. Both are eager for their coming visit to Boston and Suzanne vows she'll see all historic points, especially Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington.

SLAYER FIGHTS HANGMEN; TEAR GAS FELLS HIM

Butte, Mont., Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Tony Vettere, convicted murderer, was hanged at the county jail here today after he had been overcome with tear gas following an attack on officers who attempted to lead him to the scaffold.

Entering Vettere's cell shortly before the time set for the execution, Deputy Sheriff D. O. Robinson instructed the condemned man to prepare for the death march.

Vettere seized a piece of iron pipe which he had concealed in his bed and drove the officer from the cell, following him down the cell corridor brandishing the pipe and a knife made from a large spoon.

Robinson leaped through a door at one end of the corridor and another officer locked it. Confined to the corridor, Vettere shouted insults at the officers, and berating the judge who had sent-need him to death dared anyone to attempt to lead him to the scaffold.

Other deputies then brought two drums of tear gas and started spraying it into the corridor, driving Vettere to his cell, where they were forced to use the gas for 15 minutes before the prisoner dropped to the floor.

His arms and legs were secured as he lay in the cell and he was then carried to the gallows. There he revived sufficiently to renew his shouting as the trap was sprung.

ESTELLE'S ADMIRER, Boston—Following his success with "The Ace of Cads," Luther Reed has been chosen to direct "New York" for Paramount. But production has been halted to wait for Reed's recovery from an operation for appendicitis. In the cast are Lois Wilson, Ricardo Cortez, Estelle Taylor, William Powell and Mary Alden.

F. G. F., Boston—The feature you have in mind is "The Rough Riders," an "epic" of Theodore Roosevelt's regiment in the Spanish-American War. The picture is now in production with a splendid cast announced. Prominent among the fighting men you will find George Bancroft, Charles Emmett Mack, Charles Farrell, Noah Beery and Fred Kohler.

S. C. B., Fall River—After "The Quarterback," you will see Richard Dix and Carol Dempster in "The White Slave," based on the Bartley Campbell "melodrama" of some years ago.

COLLEGES PLAN CLASSES AWAY

Students who can't come to colleges are finding the college takes to them under the direction of Boston University and Harvard University. The schools of education of the two institutions today announced their joint extension division courses for teachers and others whose vocations prevent them from attending classes in Boston and Cambridge.

Professor John J. Mahoney of B. U. School of Education is the director of the Harvard-Boston University extension work. Designed to interest teachers principally, the courses have proved attractive to the public at large. Last year 13 courses were conducted for more than a thousand students in Revere, Bridgewater, Lawrence, Leominster, New Bedford, North Adams, Quincy, Wakefield and Waltham. Brunswick, Me., Concord, Nashua, N. H., Hartford, Conn., and Yonkers, N. Y. Professors travel from Boston to meet the classes weekly. The courses are being offered this year.

THREE OUSTED AFTER PROBE OF GAMBLING

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 1 (A.P.)—The Saratoga Springs gambling investigation has ended in the removal from office of District Attorney Charles B. Andrus and Sheriff Arthur G. Wilmot and the resignation of Commissioner of Public Safety Arthur G. Leonard.

Governor Smith issued an order removing the district attorney and sheriff. Commissioner Leonard resigned soon after Justice Heffernan, who conducted the investigation at the Governor's direction, submitted his report recommending that Saratoga county be relieved of "the officials' [illegible]ating touch" and charged them with neglect of duty.

Before issuing the order the Governor gave each official an opportunity to file answers with him. Andrus' reply was a denial of the charges. Wilmot, through his attorney, asked for an oral hearing.

The investigation was ordered by Peter Finley, president of the Saratoga Springs Taxpayers' Association, filed charges with the Governor.

Justice Heffernan found that gambling had been conducted openly in Saratoga Springs, and even "in the shadow of the courthouse."

MALDEN SAFE ROBBERS MISS $30,000 IN BONDS

Overlooking $30,000 in Liberty bonds, negotiable securities and cash, safe robbers entered the office of the Potter Drug Company factory on Medford street, Malden, forced the doors of a huge vault and ripped open two small safes and stole $200.

The money stolen was the savings of clerks in the office. The thieves ripped open every drawer except one, and in this compartment lay the valuable securities and cash. Police think the thieves were either careless or frightened away before their search could be completed.

BANKER SAYS ALL WAR DEBTS MUST BE PAID

The "sanctity" of Allied debt agreements was upheld by J. W. Beaumont Pease, chairman of directors of Lloyd's Bank, London, at the The Country Club of Brookline, where the London financier was a guest of the officers and directors of the National Shawmut Bank.

"War debts must be paid on demand," Mr. Pease declared. "Their sanctity must be preserved and their legal incurment recognized."

Mr. Pease, whose banking house is the second largest in the world in point of financial resources, did not agree with the recent pessimistic prophecy of the "Gloomy" Dean Inge of Westminster, that England was on the down grade to decay.

PART OF PROFESSION.

"Pessimism, as expressed by Dean Inge," he said "is part of his profession and his periodical predictions are not taken seriously by the British banking world."

Discussing the situation brought about by the British coal strike, the London visitor expressed his disappointment that news of a settlement had not already been published.

He stated that when he left England ten days ago an adjustment of the operators' and mine owners' problems was in sight and he anticipated reading the report of its ratification when he arrived here.

Mr. Pease expressed satisfaction with the war debt payments already made by Germany to England but foresaw difficulties if the German Government pressed fulfillment of their obligations in goods when the mark depreciated on the exchanges of the world.

"England wants the cash" he asserted, "but if she cannot get it then she must accept German goods."

Noted Alaskan Dead

North Arson, Me., Sept. 30 (A.P.)—William C. Robinson, 69, a pioneer railroad contractor in Alaska, is dead at his home here. Red Line Transportation, White Pass and the Yukon & Northwestern lines were among the roads he built.

REPORTS FINDING MANY DRUNKS ON HUB STREETS

Mrs. Mary [illegible]otes of the Patrol Dames, upon a wager, said she could find drunks every hour in Boston. She said she saw 16 drunks within a short time in the South End.

The Patriot Lames are collecting more evidence along these lines and will shortly make it public in a statement.

HUB DOCTORS ANGERED AT RUM SELLING CHARGE

Criticising the Volstead act as "unreasonable and impracticable," the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal resents as a "reflection on doctors," Captain George A. Park's announcement that 85,000 gallons of whiskey have been prescribed by Massachusetts physicians during the past year.

The official organ of the Massachusetts Medical Society said in its article: "We are quite sure that physicians are as careful in observing the prohibition requirements as any other group of persons, and we confidently believe that failure to enforce the law depends more on some of the unreasonable."

WEST END MAN BADLY INJURED BY AUTO

Isaac Hammond, 51, of No. 168 Leverett street, West End, was seriously injured today when struck by an automobile operated by Edward Mulvey of No. 150 Houlton street, Danvers, at Charles and Allen streets. Mulvey took the injured man to the Massachusetts General Hospital where it was said he had sustained possible injuries to the spine.

SALLIES ASK PERMIT FOR LYNN STREET MEETING

Amos Strickland, commander of the Lynn corps of the Salvation Army, who was fined $1 recently by Judge Reeve of the Lynn district court for conducting a Salvation Army meeting on the street, asked the mayor for permission to resume the meetings pending the superior court decision on his appeal from the fine.

Strickland told the mayor that he was making his request on instructions from superior officials of his organization in Boston, and he intimated that another attempt would be made to have such a street meeting in Lynn.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

General and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft Give Party in Honor of Daughter, Jessie

A LIGHT WITH CANDLE GLEAM AND fragrant with countless blossoms from both Bancroft and Barron conservatories and gardens, the fine old mansion house at Deer Hill, Cohasset, was a picturesque setting for General and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft's debut party in honor of their daughter, Miss Jessie Bancroft.

THE RECEIVING LINE for the afternoon tea, the first of the day's functions, stood at one end of the long drawingroom, a handsome apartment looking out over the just recently finished walled garden and its pool and terrace.

MRS. BANCROFT was in a handsome creation of black velvet combined smartly with ecru lace and the debutante wore a frock of peachy-pink chiffon distinctly bud-like in its delicate tint and simplicity of line. She carried a loose cluster of orchids, and one exotic blossom was perched on her shoulder.

TO SERVE the two or three hundred tea guests, a gaudy striped marquee was set up on the lawn, and there, doing the honors of the urn and tea cup, was a bevy of sister Bods and intimate friends of the debutante.

MRS. SHERWIN C. BADGER directed the group, which included Miss Rachel Jackson, Miss Helen Rust, Miss Margaret Leland, Miss Anita Potts (she is the daughter of Mrs. Hockhill Brevoort Potts), Miss Virginia Ayres, Miss Edith Wolcott and Miss Betty Moulton, each a bud of the year.

ALSO MISS FRANCES MEADE, Miss Jane Tucker, Miss Isabella Grandin, Miss Carol Rogers, Miss Alice Graves, and Miss Evelyn Rhodes. A youthful matron whose wedding bells chimed so recently as last June also served, Mrs. Henry Sturgis Russell, the former Miss Carolyn Towle.

BEFORE THE EVENING'S dance and after the tea, there was a formal dinner interlude with some eighty guests, including the girls who poured, a number of their beaux and an older group, some of the senior Bancroft contemporaries.

FOR THE DANCE, winding up this gaily attuned debutante presentation, several hundred young people of the bud and college man set were bidden. And altogether it was as delightful an affair as could be imagined.

AFTER A SUMMER at Marblehead Neck, diversified by excursions to important White Mountain resorts, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray and Miss Katherine Cunningham Gray are back at their Beacon street home and deep in plans for Miss Gray's wedding.

THE LOVELY DARK-EYED daughter of the Grays became betrothed to George McQuesten several weeks ago, and will in all probability trend the bridal aisle sometime in the early Winter. Handsome and accomplished, mistress of the pianoforte and an expert at sports, she will be one of the season's most interesting brides.

ANOTHER BRIDE-ELECT just back in town after a shore season, and likewise enthralled in wedding plans and details, is Miss Gretchen Brown, pretty daughter of the Jonathan Browns, who marries James C. Chaplin, 3d.

THE BROWNS left Red Top Farm in Hamilton, their pleasant country place, earlier in the week, and are settled in the town house. Miss Brown makes her marriage vows on Saturday, October 16, and will be a very easy-to-look-upon bride, with her pure blonde coloring.

MLLE. SUZANNE LENGLEN, known the wide world over as tennis star of the first magnitude, had an interesting list of ship companions when she recently crossed this way on the steamship Paris.

MISS RUTH DRAPER, quite as great a personage in her chosen field as Mlle. Lenglen is in hers, was a passenger on the Paris. Miss Draper usually includes Boston in her Winter's appearances and always is most cordially welcomed.

OF COURSE, Boston will give rousing welcome to the brilliant and temperamental Suzanne, who comes with more than a dozen trunks packed full of Parisian confections with which to befuzzle femininity on this side of the water.

DOCKING TODAY in New York, the giant Aquitania has such Boston names on its passenger list as Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Murchie, and the Hon. Mrs. Nelson Morris, each of whom has been briefly on the other side.

MRS. KENNETH C. CLINTON, with Mr. Clinton, is a Newport visitor at Mrs. Harold Brown's. Mrs. Clinton, the former Miss Audrey Hoffman, a raven-tressed beauty, is the daughter of the Mrs. Norrie Sellar, who was first Mrs. John Ellis Hoffman.

LEONARD M. THOMAS, JR., son of the former Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, who is now Mrs. John Barrymore (and in her girlhood days was Blanche Oelrichs of the old established Newport family), has left Newport for Concord and St. Paul's School.

BOSTON'S NORTH SHORE set that Summer included within its limited circle Mrs. Barrymore, who as Michael Strange was a member of Hamilton McFaddin's dramatic company which essayed a stock company in Salem. Mrs. Barrymore is by way of being a writer, as everyone knows.

RUMORS OF SUSPICIOUS MEETINGS STIR ATHENS

Athens, Greece, Oct. 1 (A.P.)—Athens was uneasy last night owing to rumors that suspicious meetings were being held by groups of officers in the provincial garrisons and news that sections of the garrisons in the capital had been confined to barracks.

The war office today denied the rumors and stated that the troops had been confined to insure order today, when a court martial is to pass sentence on Colonel Zervis, Colonel Dertila and other officers implicated in the recent mutiny.

BRITISH AIRMAN ENDS FLIGHT OF 28,000 MILES

London Oct. 1 (A.P.)—Alan J Cobham, British aviator arrived here today, completing his sensational 28,000 mile flight to Australia and return.

The plane came to rest on the water by the Parliament buildings, while huge crowds lining the banks of the river gave the flier a tremendous ovation.

The last lap of the flight started from Sartrouville near Paris. The flier took a course over the Thames at Gravesend and went up the river to Hammersmith before turning back to land at Westminister. Thus the citizens had an opportunity of welcoming the flier along many miles to the heart of London with out crowding to the alighting point

Nevertheless, while the Air Minister, the police for safety's sake, closed two of the nearest bridges, Lambeth and Westminster to spectators

Cobham estimated the distance covered by him in his three months' journey at 28,000 miles, or more than the earth's equatorial girth. His actual flying time was only about 320 hours.

The Daily Mail calculates Cobham in his aerial flights in various parts of the world has now covered a half million miles. It is believed King George will confer knighthood upon him

Cobham, left Rochester, Eng., June 30. Crossed Europe, Asia Minor, India, the Malay Peninsula, and the East Indies and arrived at Port Darwin, Australia, August 5.

He left there September 4.

SEES WOMEN AWAKENING OVER ENTIRE WORLD

NOTED AUTHOR AND SON

Mrs. Frances P. Keyes declares "modern women" are not a sole product of the U. S. Women all over the world are showing strong evidence of advancement.

LAUDS WOMEN OF ALL NATIONS

The surge of women upward and onward is a world movement and not merely confined to America, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes of New Hampshire declared when she reached New York after finishing an assignment to cover the globe.

Mrs. Keyes, the wife of United States Senator Keyes, was the first woman to be given the mission of touring the world and broadcasting her impressions to the millions of readers of Good House Keeping. She has written an article every month for six years for Good House Keeping, and her letters from abroad are one of the features of the magazine.

"We American women are inclined to think that we alone are advancing, progressing," said Mrs. Keyes. "To see what the women of other places are doing is to lose our superiority complex. Take, for instance, the Chinese women. They are astonishing. I met a brilliant woman banker in China who is a real power. The surge of woman upward and onward is a world movement."

Mrs. Keyes met presidents, high commissioners, cabinet ministers, generals, princesses and dictators in her travels and collected a huge store of gifts and articles for her home in New Hampshire, Boston and Washington. Henry W. Keyes Jr., the eldest of her three sons, accompanied her on her homeward trip. He is a student at Harvard.

Underneath the Street

Few of the many thousands of automobilists and pedestrians passing daily between the Boston postoffice and the South Station are aware that business of importance is going on underneath the street as well as on the street and on either side of them.

A metal cylinder is filled with letters at the postoffice. It is placed on the dispatching machine. A button is pressed. The machinery starts. A bell rings at the South Station to show it has arrived there.

In ninety seconds the cylinder is back on the receiving table at the postoffice. More than 2,500 pneumatic tube carriers are transmitted daily.

Every carrier holds about 400 pieces of mail.

Besides "heart throbs," they all carry mail that speeds along the business of Greater Boston, the rest of Massachusetts and New England.

Speed is indeed an essential of modern business.

'LOW' CHURCH PROTESTS ACT OF BISHOP

New York, Oct. 1 (A P)—An announcement of the Right Rev. John Gardiner Murray, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, that he will attend the second annual Catholic Congress in Milwaukee, October 12 to 14, has stirred "low" church men to protest that his position would present his taking part in what is avowedly a partisan meeting.

The executive committee of the Protestant Episcopal Society for the Promotion of Evangelical Knowledge has sent a communication to Bishop Murray saying that his presence at the congress would lead, it is alleged, to disrupt the church. Other centers of protest have been sent to the "low" church organs of the communion, the Churchman, published in New York, and the Churchman published in Boston, it is said.

When Bishop Murray was elected after the Anglo-Catholic movement had become organized in the church organization, he declared himself to be a "middle of the road" attitude on the "high church," or Catholic movement.

Bishop Manning Endorses Action of Episcopal Head

New York, Oct. 1 (A P)—Bishop William T. Manning returning today on the Aquitania after visiting Rome, Italy and Switzerland, said he found a deep anxious feeling in those countries. "The countries I visited seemed to be prosperous and the people contented and hard at work," he said.

Referring to the decision of Rt. Rev. John Gardiner Murray, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, to attend the second annual Catholic congress in Milwaukee, Bishop Manning said:

"I am quite interested in Bishop Murray's decision and feel quite sure that nothing he may do will be also wed considered and proper for him to do as presiding bishop of the Episcopal church."

Asked concerning his attitude towards the possibility of a merger between the Episcopal church and the Roman Catholic church, he said: "I am greatly interested in drawing all churches together."

The SECRET STUDIO by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

A Boston Story With a Charming Girl Heroine

She ought to be angry, but she wasn't. You couldn't be angry with Larry—when you knew him. It was so nice being near him.

Rosemary Merton, youngest daughter in a large Roxbury family, rebels at her poor surroundings and dreams of romance and luxury. She is attending college, but lack of money prevents her from taking part in college social activities. Philip Eames, a young man who has been in Japan, comes home and Rosemary welcomes him happily. She imagines he is in love with her, but is speedily disillusioned. She quits college and gets a job in a fashionable bookstore through a friend, Nina Clark. Nina takes Rosemary up the back stairs in the building to a studio occupied by a group of artists. They call it the Secret Studio. They hold a party and Rosemary attends with Larry Kane, one of the artists, Sunday; the next day Rosemary and Larry go to the studio alone, where they are surprised by Sloan Whitney.

CHAPTER XVII.

TO go up to the studio on a Sunday? When nobody else was there. Well, why not? She wasn't a baby!

There wasn't anything to be afraid of. And after the first few minutes it seemed perfectly natural to be there. Larry had thrown open the windows. The big, barnlike studio was full of light and air.

He whistled as he sketched. "I just have to block this in, so that I can tell the fellow my idea of the thing in the morning. It won't take but a minute."

Rosemary looked over his shoulder. He put down his pencil. "Do I bother you?" she asked coyly.

"You're so beautiful, Rosemary," he sighed. "You can't help it—but you do bother me."

She drew back. Again that little fear, cold upon her. Oh, but it was silly, silly. What would he think of her? How Ellen and Nina would laugh at her . . . and Larry so nice.

A Sunday quiet lay over the big, dusty studio. The faint din from the boulevard below, the windows carried with it none of the workaway rumblings that usually drifted up from the street below.

Larry tucked his hands in his pockets and whistled softly. Rosemary knew you wiggle and you'll up in corners."

She came over to him. "Do I bother you, Larry?"

He looked up smiling. There were little flecks of light in his eyes, like sunshine in some deep pool. Their very color—that odd, gray green depths.

And how crisp and curly his hair!

EX-CABINET MEMBER AT WARSAW BEATEN UP

Warsaw, Oct. 1 (I.N.S.).—Extreme tension followed the reelection of the Bartel ministry as a result of the Government's failure to obtain a vote of confidence on the budget proposals.

The serious nature of the friction between the enemies and adherents of President Pilsudski was indicated when several officers today raided the bedroom of former Finance Minister Viehowski, leader of the opposition. The ex-cabinet member was beaten into unconsciousness and a gas bomb was left in his room.

Army Drops Silver Chevron as Mark of Service

The silver chevron, badge of service, in this country during the World War, ceased to be an item of army insignia, it was announced. One such chevron for each six months in the army at home was authorized to adorn the uniform sleeve.

Those who got to Europe in uniform during the war, however, are still to wear the gold chevron—a gold onevron for each six months of service overseas.

Vocal Shot and Shell That Hits His Head Makes Him Surrender

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Evening American)

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 1.—Wilfred O. Cross, who two weeks ago, as undergraduate of the University of Illinois held up the collective co-ed of the country to a fiery criticism as participants in pajama parties and drinking bouts, proved himself today a saddened philosopher.

He is dismayed by the barrage of feminine grenades he had drawn upon his head.

Young Cross is a student of Berkeley Theological Seminary and on the first day of his pursuit of a pulpit he admitted that he had rushed in where the well known angels fear to tread, and added that from now on the coed could take her own "ruinous path" without help or criticism from him.

HE'S "MISUNDERSTOOD."

With his feet on his desk in a dormitory here the young divinity student accused press and pulpit of misconstruing his article in "The Witness," an Episcopalian publication of Chicago.

"This is an amusing storm in a teacup," he said, though he showed no amusement as he looked at the sheaf of letters and telegrams that lay on his desk.

"The disturbances caused by my article were actually brought about by misrepresentation and misquotations of my article," he went on, in his belated alibi.

His article in "The Witness" was evidently but the abstract essay of a philosopher in its beginning, a somewhat young philosopher perhaps, but nevertheless a philosopher, and he discussed women in the abstract.

IT'S LIVE AND LEARN.

The co-ed and the Lapper undoubtedly would have fewer seen his article had he stopped there, but he didn't.

He added the interesting details of a pajama party between co-eds and male students, which he said he saw passed on a college football train, and added the difficulty the male students had in finding their own berths.

He concluded with the naive intimation that such was the general rule in co-educational institutions throughout the land, and then the storm broke.

The boys, both employed in the Salmon Falls Mills, obtained permission to go duck hunting on the common Falls River, but for some unexplained reason changed their minds and stopped for quail.

Not long afterwards Shuflat came back and told Demer's parents that he had been wounded by the well known hunter in the woods.

The boy repeated the story to Sheriff Davis, explaining that the quail had struck Demer's cartridge belt, detonating a shell which tore in a hole in his abdomen.

Under closer questioning the boy then admitted that it was shot from his own gun and struck Demers.

While the sheriff believed the shooting to be accidental he took the boy and brought him to the city for questioning by Attorney General Waldron and County Prosecutor Galloway.

How Herb Treat Picks 'Em

Harvard to beat Geneva, 16-7.
Yale to beat B. U. by 30 points.
Princeton to topple Amherst, 24-6.
B. C. to defeat C. U. by two touchdowns.
Holy Cross to take St. Johns by 7 points.
Brown to triumph over Colby, 33-0.
Georgetown to defeat Pittsburgh, 13-3.
Syracuse to win over Vermont, 20-0.
Williams-Middlebury a good tossup.
W. & J. to beat Bucknell by small score.
Mass. Aggies to trim Bates by 14 points.

By HERB TREAT

Well, brother football fans, today starts us off on another season of our favorite Fall pastime of picking the winners of each week's most important college football classics.

If we are nearly as successful as in our initial venture last season, and you fans enjoy and profit by our efforts to the extent you did in 1925, we will consider the present campaign a big success.

It is no easier or no harder to reach a verdict as to the probable winners of games this season than it was last year, or the year before or than it will be next season or two seasons from now.

Harvard Will Win, 16-7

Harvard-Geneva—(1925, no game.)

Two mystery teams will engage in what looks to be a toss-up at the opening of the Stadium tomorrow afternoon. Harvard, as we all know, is strong between the tackles but just fair at ends with the backfield untried and unless the new western coaches have taught the Crimson footballers some forward pass defence, which department has been noticeably weak of late years, then Whitmore's passes should be good for at least one touch down for Bo McMillan's outfit.

Geneva has imported a few stars from the Pittsburgh district and will make every effort to bring home a victory. Bo McMillan was a star player and has had fair success as a coach. He can't expect to compete with the high class array of coaches that appear on the Harvard staff. For reserve material the Cumberdge eleven also has the edge. From outside the "fence" we hear that Harvard is to use the huddle system and I doubt if it impresses tomorrow but given time it should work out to be a highly successful offensive weapon.

With Crosby and Turner ready for the whistle I look for a Harvard victory by about ten points.

My score, Harvard 16, Geneva 7.

Yale-Boston University.

These teams did not meet in 1925, and even if they did it wouldn't mean much in helping us to select the winner of tomorrow's setup. Coaches Robinson and Rexy Brown got off to a poor start against Bowdoin, but I am sure they will have their team ready to give Yale a good game the first half. Yale's tremendous reserve power should wear down the Terrier defence so that by the third quarter Fishwick, Kline, Bunnell and Wadsworth will romp away in real bulldog manner.

The B11, too, will use the huddle system as an offensive weapon, and also I expect that it will not go very good. I say this because it took Princeton three years to master it, and it was only until the last two games of last year that the real secret of the huddle system was accomplished by the Tigers. Yale has a fine team and should have a good year.

It looks like about 30 points as the marginal victory for Yale.

Princeton-Amherst—(1925, Princeton 20, Amherst 0.)

Bill Roper starts the season off with the best set of backs in any team in the country in Siagle, Prendegast, Caulkins, Williams, Case, Bridges and Requardt. Strong at ends and an aggressive pass charging line the Tigers should go through the season undefeated.

Amherst, on the other hand, has a good team and will give Princeton plenty of trouble, but cannot hope to cope with the tremendous speed and power of the Roper-coached eleven. I look for about an 18-point difference in score with Amherst possibly crossing the line for 6 points.

Make it Princeton 24, Amherst 6.

Boston College-Catholic University—(1925, B. C. 6, C. U. 0.)

Major Cavanaugh's ripsnorting backfield of Captain McKenny, Cronin, Weston and Smith, with Brockton Pat Creedon as a reserve speed back, should punch their way to two touchdowns over Jack McAuliffe's strong Washington team. B. C.'s line I expect will show the results of the fine coaching it has had from such capable linemen as Comerford, Koyiowski and Doyle. B. C. should have a good year. Tomorrow's game will mean much if the Eagles can get off on the right foot.

B. C. 13, C. U. 0.

Holy Cross to Shade St. John's

Holy Cross-St. John's—(1925, H. C. 9, St. John's 6.)

Despite the fact that St. John's defeated Percy Wendell's Lehigh team last week and that Cleo O'Donnell's Holy Cross eleven is said to be inexperienced, Kiltredge, Wise and Lowery are three backs that are not found on many gridirons, and coupled with a mediocre line anyone of the three is capable of getting loose for a score or two.

Cleo has been fortunate in having the services of Buddy Corcoran and Pitzer Fitzgerald to assist him in the preliminary season and because of this fact I anticipate the "inexperienced" Purple team to gain a victory and make a splendid impression. It will be a close game.

I'll pick this Cross by 7 points.

Brown-Colby—(1925, Brown 33, Colby 0.)

Coaches Tuss McLaughry and Ed McMillan have been working arduously in whipping into shape a team which will be representative of Brown.

The team suffers greatly the loss of Keefer and other stars of last year's team. Colby is handicapped in that it is their opener and the Bears' record game. Colby will be stronger than last year, and Brown weaker.

Brown should win by about 20 points, having better material to call upon.

Pittsburgh-Georgetown—(1925, no game.)

This game is easily the headliner. Pitt has suffered greatly the loss of most of last year's team, but Coach Sutherland can always be depended upon to produce a real fighting aggregation. Tom Little, at Georgetown has a fine collection of men working under him and should continue where he left off last year. The loss of Plansky and Hagerty, two Boston boys, will be greatly felt, but I feel that his system has been absorbed and victory should continue on old Georgetown.

The game, with Georgetown having everything under control, that is not stage frightened in the big Pitt Stadia, should terminate with the Hill Toppers on top.

Well, 13 to 3 is an approximate score.

Syracuse-Vermont—(1925, Syracuse 26, Vermont 0.)

Capt. Vic Harrison's team didn't show so well against the [illegible] eleven last week and will find some troubles with the Vermonters who by the way, caused Columbia to show everything to win last week's game by a two-touchdown margin.

It often takes a team like Syracuse some time to get going so Pete Reynolds should have the Orange set for the Green tomorrow.

Syracuse 20, Vermont 0.

Williams-Middlebury—(1923, no game.)

These two teams lost close games last Saturday, Williams lost to Providence, 10 to 7, and Wesleyan conquered Middlebury, 7 to 0. By comparative scores it looks like a toss up.

A close game. A good chance for a tie.

Washington & Jefferson-Bucknell—(1925, no game.)

This game will be second only to Pitt-Georgetown as far as determining the strength of the big league gridiron machines. Although by comparative scores and early season done Bucknell appears to have the edge, I have confidence in W. & J. and Coach Morrow who always can win nine out of ten games a season.

A close game with the Presidents ahead.

Mass. Aggies-Bates—(1925, Mass. Aggies 19, Bates 0.)

These two New England rivals are matched rather evenly and the game should provide plenty of thrills. The Aggies have the edge in material and playing conditions.

The Agriculturists look good to me by 14 points.

RICHARDS MOVE SHOCKS 'PURE' RANKS

New York, Oct. 1 (I.N.S.)—Tennis fans, still dizzy from a season of upsets, the loss of the national singles championship to France, and the invasion of Suzanne Lenglen, were given another shock today by the announcement that Vincent Richards, third ranking American star, had turned professional under the banner of Promoter C. C. Pyle, manager of Mlle. Lenglen, "Red" Grange and Mary K. Browne.

At a dinner given aboard the liner Paris in honor of Mlle. Lenglen Pyle announced that Richards had joined his troupe and would appear in a nation-wide tour of exhibition matches. He introduced the young star as "the greatest male tennis player in the world."

Richards said he turned professional "in justice to his little daughter and his wife." Amateur tennis players do not obtain large sums of money, as generally believed, he said.

Richards, who had been regarded as William T. Tilden's logical successor as the king pin of American tennis and as America's hope to retain the singles championship of France, was the only member of the American team to reach the semi-finals in the national tournament this year. He had defeated Tilden, Dick Williams and other leading stars.

At the age of fourteen, Richards won the national doubles championship with Tilden. Coached by Tilden, he quickly rose to the front rank in the tennis world, often defeating his mentor. He holds the Olympic singles title and with Wallace won the national doubles title both this year and last.

Tennis experts who agree that Richards earned the title of American champion this year, now are wondering just how the players will be ranked by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Richards would not discuss the terms of his contract, but said the offer was one that he could not refuse. He expressed regret that he was through with amateur tennis and would be unable to help defend the Davis Cup.

RICHARDS NOW A PRO

VINCENT RICHARDS

Third ranking American tennis player, whose "seduction" to pro ranks by Charles C. Pyle, arch promoter, leaves a serious gap in the amateur field. His turning professional is a severe blow to America's Davis Cup hopes.

The WOMAN GAME or "GLITTER"

by KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of College Life; a Fast and Furious Romance

CHAPTER XXXIV.

SHE turned and darted between lines of parked motorcycles and bicycles that made her way [illegible] pavement. There for an instant she stood irresolute. Her impulse to rush through the door and refresh herself with cooling air was succeeded by a [illegible] that outside air would be perilous, it being February and [illegible] a. m.

Mrs. Hamill was careful of herself, as she was of all exquisite fabrics and things. She hurried [illegible] return big awkward fur from her ankles to her ears.

She opened the huge front door and closed it as [illegible] very nearly, but it [illegible] coffin with [illegible] Jock.

For some [illegible] had existed between [illegible] formality, reserve, [illegible] of defiance, at last [illegible] now. She reached [illegible] would too much [illegible] and shut the door. And she said in her normal voice, "Why, hello, dear."

"Hello, mother," said Jock, and went to kiss her. "What goes on, anyway? Old Home Week, or some thing? There must be a million [illegible] lines parked outside."

"I'm giving a little party," replied Mrs. Hamill. She laid hands on Jock's coat and pulled him so that the porch lights fell full on her. "Look at me, rascal! Have you been expelled? Don't keep your poor mother in suspense. And where's your hat? Did you—Jock, you didn't come all the way from college on a Winter night without a hat?"

Her questions amused her faintly, so inconsequent they seemed. Dear God, what did it matter why he had come, or whether or not he had come bareheaded? He was here. And the veil of twelve years' tireless weaving was about to be swept from before him in one stroke, like a cobweb attacked with a broom.

"No hat at all," she heard him say. "I 'spose you'll gain me in till I tell for mercy—"

"I shall indeed."

"Well, you see," he explained, "I didn't know I was coming. I jumped in the roaster about eight o'clock after a rain-in with a girl—with someone, and started to drive like hell, and the first thing I knew I was a good fifty miles on my way here. So I came along the rest of the way."

He hugged her close impulsively. "I wanted to talk to you anyway. I'm all tired up in the head to-night and want you even to rid of and it's up to you to help me untwist. Say, let's go in and see. Here we stand like a couple of night watchmen—"

"No, wait!" cried Mrs. Hamill. And then, as Jock stared at her in evident surprise, she added as lightly as she could, "It just occurred to me—wouldn't you rather go in the back door, dearest? Then you will sneak up the back stairs to your room and you wouldn't have to see anybody."

"I know how you hate to have a lot of people [illegible] you, so you call it. And I'll join you up there in just a few minutes for a nice quiet chat—"

"Who's all in there?" Jock interrupted. "Any females?"

"No one—"

"Then come on. I don't mind." He took her arm and led her indoors, wondering while he did so why she laughed, a little hysterically.

Jock's Mother Tells Him the Story of the Previous Years

The mist car droned down the drive and away into the reddening sunrise. Jock, at a window, watched it until it disappeared; after that he watched the place where it had been.

From somewhere in the room behind him he could hear small sounds, significant. . . . Chips rustling into their boxes. Glasses clinking together on a tray. Voices, [illegible] there, Bennett's, the crooning [illegible] arms. "Do you mean to say you've been doing this—" The [illegible] in a sentence encompassed all the things he had witnessed since he entered the house—for twelve years?"

Mrs. Hamill nodded. "Ever since a year or two after your father died [illegible] he didn't leave any money, Jock. Not a cent. I've always told you he did, but he didn't. We were pitifully poor when he was alive—you don't remember those days, do you? Do you remember anything at all about your father?"

"A little," Jock answered. "That he liked baseball—funny a detail like that should stick in my crawl—and that he was all the time writing at a desk. I have a vague idea what he looked like, too, but perhaps I got that from pictures."

"Probably. You were only eight! Well, he was a dear and splendid person, your father but dreamy, unpractical—he was like everything that the term is always supposed to mean and usually doesn't."

She contemplated Jock with musing eyes. "You're his son, of course, don't you think, but you have his temperament—most sedulously coated over with undergraduate varnish but it's there."

Jock would have repudiated this as he perversely did any such positive reference; but he saw that his mother was not really thinking of him at all, except as the twig of the tree. So he sat [illegible] waiting with evenness. These facts about his father were impressing him enormously. "Keys to me, he told himself.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is powerful by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agents for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and consequent coughing, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Iodine and Goiter

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

IODINE has been widely and properly hailed as a preventative of goiter in parts of the country where the disease prevails.

The [illegible] now is coming which shows that salts containing iodine, like all other things, ought to be used discriminatingly.

To understand this statement it is important to remember that goiter, a disease of the thyroid gland, is known in the neck, in [illegible] varieties. In one variety there is an excess of thyroid action, a condition known as hyperthyroidism. In the other there is a diminution of thyroid activity, a condition known as hypo-thyroidism. These varieties are widely different in their symptoms but equally embarrassing in their effect upon the system.

Iodine, when there is already an excess of thyroid secretion it is evident that no iodine should be given—especially in the form of salt.

When there is too little of the thyroid secretion late experiments show that the condition is to [illegible] by taking small doses of pure iodine, the so-called iodine B. in water. This is practically tasteless and is said to be much less objectionable than iodine in salt.

In cases in which there is no goiter but in which iodine is given simply as a preventative there seems to be a tendency actually to develop excess of thyroid secretion with consequent goiter symptoms.

In view of these facts Drs. Crile, Phillips and Hartwell, who have gone deeply into the subject, while recognizing the value of iodine in many goiter cases, discourage the indiscriminate taking of iodine salt by whole communities.

I thoroughly agree with them that each case ought to be individualized and the course of treatment, preventive or curative, determined by the physician.

I also agree with Hartsock that there are many actual conditions that contraindicate the use of iodine salt in large doses of actual goiter.

I also agree with him that "Iodine administered in small quantities, particularly, to children under the age of puberty is a very efficient preventive of goiter. Its use should be begun early and continued until puberty" in all localities in which goiter is prevalent.

Iodine, while of great value as a preventative in adults, should never be given to them continuously for a long time simply because its professed use tends to the development of hyperthyroidism.

MEDBURY SAYS---

A KANSAS J.P. has given that a married woman is entitled to her husband's pay envelope. This is to prevent her from getting a separate wife allowance from the county.

ONE man could be never used to give his wife a black eye. Wife cause she never had a man to be married to the Western Union.

ANOTHER reason why a man is afraid of his wife is because she has been known to have her hubby on the front porch and run.

HE got the man across the street to ring the doorbell for him.

A LOT of husbands don't come home with their salary. This is a good idea, but when one fellow tried it, his wife started setting traps in front of his office.

THERE are three books from which we get our Bible stories. It's getting hard to cover the messenger boys are afraid to hand it to her.

THE way she feels with them would make a man married to the Western Union.

DIVORCED

By Colin MacLaren

"LOOK here, Clarissa," said Clement Landis, "what's the use of keeping up appearances? I tell you frankly I'm sick of you."

"If you're only half as sick of me as I am of you, believe," returned his wife naively, "you're sick, all right."

"—tion for Pete's sake! let's get divorced!"

Clarissa got up and shook him by the hand. "Yes, it's wholly divorce with on what grounds? Where? Reno—Reno—"

"Leave it to me," he said . . . And consulted his watch.

"Joe to Hell in New York, either way," he was told.

But then one day it, the mail came in a cheque—a cheery little thing with pictures of moonrises behind palms, natives and adobe ghosts adjacent. "Come to Yucatan," it cooed, "Yucatan—the Egypt of America . . ."

Casually he scanned the list till a subhead stopped him dead. "Divorce in Yucatan — the only ground required is that there is no longer love . . . Round trip, dittos inclusive (table d'hote service), $300."

He held it out. Clarissa eyed it. Her face lit. "Say!" she cried, "that's the ticket—Let's toss for who goes."

"No." s' Clem. "look here better both go, that . . . that forced them to same one. First surp . . . and wife k . . . and take sea . . . a stretch of pa . . . But with the lin . . . A filthy, evi . . . congress- we're quite de . . . spot de . . . and d he . . .

Arrived. And with Merida, the outlook changed. A pretty town, the streets wide and clean, the swaying fronds of banana trees and cocoa palms like a dark lace between yellow houses; dainty Yucatan girls in colorful muslins . . . arm in arm over the wide . . . prosperous looking beers . . . ing on every corner, as though there was no such . . . in the world as . . . living; flowers everywhere, music in the air, the whole place is just a big comic opera."

Then at last. "Today they will be hers you," announced I to Clem "Senora, today you shall be free, free to fly like a bird!" Whispered a half amorous official in Clarissa's ear.

She didn't know . . .

Across the court room their eyes met—but then each looked away "I swear," said Clem, with a face of stee., "I do not love this woman" "I swear," said Clarissa—and if her voice was queer no one noticed it—"I do not love this man."

Midnight. Clem could not sleep. At first he blamed the heat. Presently, though, he found other things. Through the open window drifted strains, strains of romantic, old time Spanish airs; langorous voices filled the stillness.

Suddenly, as in a dream, he got up, put on some clothes, and went down stairs. In the lobby the orchestra was just leaving. Slipping a gold piece into some one's hand, he passed outside. Down the street he walked, swinging a guitar . . . on and on . . . to the other end of town. Under a balcony, he halted.

And presently, as if of its own accord, the guitar began to play . . . "Juanita," "Rose O'Grady," "Just One Girl," "selections from Carmen . . . Warming up, it passed to lighter things . . . And now, to accompany it there came a voice, a tenor voice, of a tone reminiscent of college glees . . .

Somewhere a latch clicked. A shutter flew wide . . . and on the balcony a white form appeared.

Next morning Clem was half repentant. He didn't know . . .

"Senor, we are sorry, but you are under arrest," came a voice.

"Arrest?" he queried, looking up. "Whatever for?"

"Perjury, senor," was the calm response.

"Perjury?"

"Si, Senor. Yesterday, you swore you did not love. Last night, you were . . . to go. . . . It is not possible. . . ."

". . . But Clem saw the . . . ch it quickly, a trick to keep him longer, to make him pay, still . . . "And the Senora?" he asked.

"The Senora, too, is under arrest . . . your service, Senor."

"It shall be arranged."

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

ONCE UPON a time, every girl looked forward to marriage as she did to Christmas Day, and to a husband as a Life-Santa-Claus.

But, nowadays, nearly every girl is her own Santa Claus, who goes out and brings home her own Christmas tree and buys her own baubles.

Marriage is no longer the royal road to a life of ease and luxury.

• • •

It is more like a labor-union, in which two jobs and two pay-envelopes blossom where there used to be only one.

• • •

"I'll clean your safety-razor, if you'll powder my back and cover me with diamonds," is no longer the slogan of domestic reciprocity. It's "I'll run a typewriter downtown and help with the bills, if you'll turn the washing machine uptown and help with the meals."

• • •

"Every morn, I bring thee violets," is not the modern lover's line."

• • •

When a man gets through paying for the theatre tickets, the taxi and the cover charge, he is just about exhausted financially—and romantically. And, it's the hand that wears the engagement ring that buys its own orchids and brings its own violets, most of the time.

• • •

Girls no longer look forward to Christmas Day as the harvest time, when they will gather in enough gloves, silk stockings and imported wrist-watches to last throughout the year.

When a girl wants anything, from a husband to a motor-car, she first gets a job—and then goes AFTER it! She knows that is the quickest and surest way to get it.

When Christmas comes around she climbs down her own chimney and fills her own little stocking—and is pleased and thankful if she doesn't have to kiss herself under the mistletoe.

It is a little sad and unromantic to us who once enjoyed the sweetness and thrill of being clinging and dependent.

The fifty-fifty marriage has led to the fifty-fifty courtship—and every girl has GOT to be her own Santa Claus.

BE CAREFUL TO AVOID ALL APPEARANCES OF EVIL

ARE you not often too free and careless about your actions with the opposite sex?

It would hurt and anger you mightily if anyone should insinuate or even intimate that you would overstep the bounds of propriety.

You are more liberal in considering your own actions than people are when they judge you, you may be sure.

It requires very little to start whisperings of a bad character about a married person, particularly a woman.

It is but a short step until these form themselves into an evil and repeated accusation.

You cannot afford to take such a chance with your reputation.

Possibly your friends may not misjudge you; but those who know you slightly will believe evil of you and soon your reputation is blackened.

Certain others are always eager to besmirch the name of a socially prominent or seemingly popular person.

It is the best plan to avoid the appearance of evil.

All those you look upon as your friends are not as true as you think. So guard your actions for your own sake and for those you respect.

Quick Quaker

RESPECTING PROPERTY

By T. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

THE Harrisons were taking a cross country trip in their car, and the three children were having the best time of their young lives. Every day they drove miles and miles, stopping along the way to rest and eat and play. Once a day, at noon or in the evening, they stopped under the spreading branches of a big tree and cooked their food outdoors.

And so the six day journey was enjoyed. But along with the pleasure of that outing, the young lifarrons learned a most valuable lesson—that of preserving public property.

They were never allowed to deface a tree. They were not permitted to mar the landscape in any way. They were encouraged to leave the camping ground a little cleaner than they found it. Papers were burned and left-over food placed where a hungry animal might find and consume it. There was no preaching on the subject. It was simply a matter of course that this rule should be observed both by the parents and the children.

One has only to walk through any public park in any city of mixed population to find evidences of the vandalism that characterizes ignorant visitors. And the destruction of plants or of public property is not confined to the younger generation by any means. Which proves all over again that many people's early training was woefully neglected.

Most every little boy and girl has the impulse to pull flowers or fruit from a yard that looks inviting.

But this tendency should be nipped in the bud. The next offense after that is the wilful uprooting or beating down of somebody else's plant.

Limbs torn from a little tree; shrubbery trampled under foot; grass scared from mischievous flames—all of these and more be speak a spirit that is too often abroad in places meant for recreation.

Those parents who wink at the defacement of rented property, or who take no care of that which belongs to others, need not be surprised at any outbreak on the part of their unfortunate offspring.

The simple task of keeping stray covers off the premises and the adjacent street gives a child a very definite idea of conservation. In addition to that he can be persuaded to water or use the hose to wash the sidewalk. His attending to the small things that make a place presentable means that a big step has been taken toward implanting in his character a wholesome respect for property.

Mussolini Is Angry

Quite Naturally

Europe's latest anti-peace bomb is Mussolini's threat against France for permitting anarchists to conspire safely on French soil, then throw bombs at Mussolini.

The French newspapers and public men reply with a patience that is admirable. Briand politely congratulates Mussolini on his escape.

French newspapers point out that an ITALIAN citizen threw a bomb on ITALIAN SOIL, something the French police could not prevent. They ask the Italian frontier guard to keep Italians from entering France. They also point out that when Caserio, an Italian, murdered Sadi Carnot, President of the French Republic, on French soil, France did not threaten war against Italy.

It would be interesting to see how Mussolini would acquit himself as the head of the Italian army in a war with France. Foch is still alive and not to be overlooked. However, there will be no such war.

Mussolini, in danger every minute, may well be excused for losing his temper.

Big Task for Able Man

Much Depends on Summerall

An army's mainstay is its infantry.

When you next hear Uncle Sam accused of "militarism," remind the critic that the Harvard Stadium could seat all the infantrymen in our Regular Army and have thousands of seats to spare.

With so small a standing Army, our national defense obviously requires a high morale among its rank and file. The little organization that we have must be kept EVER READY for the emergency, when it will become the nucleus of a swift expansion.

That is why much depends on who is Chief of Staff.

A man in that key position, who has not only a soldierly conception of his job, but is able by his personality to put his ideas across to indifferent civilians, is of the utmost value, just as a weaker man, powerless to avert the Army's slumping, would be a public peril.

The drift of foreign prejudice is unfriendly to the United States and may remain so for a generation.

The drift of home opinion has been away from the adequate defense which prudence so plainly calls for.

It is, therefore, fortunate that the next Chief of Staff is to be Major-General Charles P. Summerall.

In all our Army there is no better soldier, nor one more clearly impressed by the importance of being peaceful, but ready for any foe.

He has seen what war is and how unpreparedness multiplies its costs and terrors. His personality, we believe, will be commensurate with his task.

Man No Longer Stronger

Should Women Go to War?

We are beginning to revise the old belief in man as the stronger sex.

Miss Maud Cairney, of London, the other day crossed the Weisshorn, in Switzerland, being the first woman to accomplish the feat.

Before this two American women had swum the English Channel, Miss Ederle making the passage in shorter time than it was ever made before.

Girls usually are better swimmers than men.

It is well known that women have more fortitude—that is, they can endure severe pain better than men.

Now it is evident that in some respects they have more physical force.

This is a challenge to the old idea that women are the weaker sex.

The entrance of women into business and professions, and their outdoing of men in physical feats, carries with it a certain responsibility.

The question is whether women should not go to war, as well as men. They can certainly pull a trigger as well as a man can, and they seem, in accordance with recent events, to be better able to endure hardship.

It should not be forgotten that every liberty and every attainment carries with it a certain responsibility, and those who boast of the new attainments of women should not lose sight of this.

The Cat and the King

Preacher and Judge

The Rev. E. F. Shumaker, superintendent of Indiana's anti-saloon league, criticizes the Supreme Court of his State, saying the judges permit too many technicalities in cases against bootleggers and, therefore, the bootleggers cannot be convicted.

The Court proceeds against the Rev. Shumaker for contempt, but Mr. Shumaker goes ahead with his criticism.

The reverend gentleman has not accused any judge of dishonesty or corruption. He criticizes court methods.

The courts belong to the people, not to the judges, and any citizen, especially a clergyman, should have the right to criticize court procedure.

He should not have the right to speak in such a way as to bring judges into contempt, or to weaken the courts by reckless accusations against judges as individuals.

Not All Bad

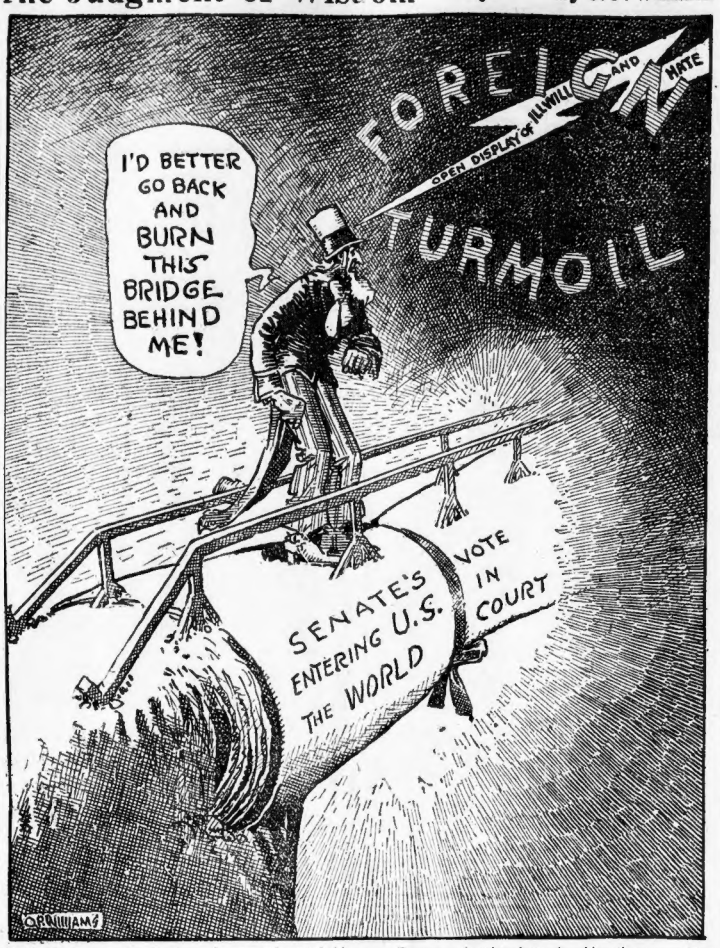
Senator Caraway's accusation that American soldier graves in France are being desecrated seems happily to have no serious foundation.

It did not sound plausible in the first place, because it went counter to human nature. The worst of men instinctively abate their enmities toward the dead.

The French and we do not see alike on many questions, but they are not, for that reason, to be maligned. We shall be friends with them again one day, let us hope. It will then be pleasant to remember that during the estrangement our ill-thinking of them was not complete.

The Judgment of Wisdom

By O. P. Williams



JUST 247 days ago the Senate, under gag rule, voted this nation into a conditional adherence to the so-called World Court—really only an annex of the League of Nations we had rejected.

Every test since has shown that this action was contrary to the American people's will.

Whatever Geneva does, it is the duty of the Senate to rescind this betrayal.

A Powerful Spaniard

How Long Will He Last?

GENERAL PRIMO DE RIVERA, MARQUIS DE ESTELLA, BOSS OF SPAIN.

Men think they can govern themselves until REAL trouble comes, just as a child thinks it can manage itself until the dark settles down. When trouble comes grown men rush to some one man to guide and protect them, as the frightened child rushes to its mother in fear of the dark. This is one of the men that the war has brought to the surface as one-man rule in a big country.

Turkey has Kemal Pasha. Russia has Trotsky, and had Lenin. Italy has Mussolini, and Mussolini has Italy and Italy's full confidence.

This is Spain's "Strong Man" of the hour in military uniform.

He is the King's adviser, in fact, THE REAL KING of Spain.

While King Alfonso, born to pleasure and pursuing it, plays polo in London, swims at Biarritz, motors seventy miles an hour all over Europe, this more solid Spaniard stays at home and manages Spain.

General Primo De Rivera got his power by using the army, establishing a military directorate. He gave that up ten months ago, established a civil government and made himself president of the council.

At present parts of the army have turned against him. He tried to make the army and its officers more democratic. That did not suit the officers, especially the artillery officers.

He is the MAN OF THE HOUR now, but no one knows how MANY hours of power may remain to this powerful Spaniard. It is an interesting face, the sort of man that might be expected to say, if he spoke English, "LEAVE IT TO ME."

WIRELESS SENSATION

"PAT" COSTELLO of the ELECTION COMMISSIONER'S office stepped into a hornet's nest when he innocently remarked in the crowd watching the recount in the MARCELLA-ROGNA Senatorial contest at the NORTH END:

"MARCONI the wireless wizard is an Irishman and his real name is MARK COONEY."

A REGULAR FELLOW.

To be wealthy and a clergyman and not too proud to carry a basket on his arm to the poor. That's the sort of man the REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON, D. D., is. He has helped distribute CHRISTMAS baskets to the needy for the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

DR. JOHNSON is reputed to be one of the wealthiest clergymen in GREATER BOSTON. He owns large properties in Seattle. Just now he is filling the pulpit at DUDLEY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH for the pastor, the REV. ARTHUR T. BROOKS, D. D., who is on an eight months' leave.

DR. JOHNSON'S preaching and charitable work while pastor at WARREN AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH made him a conspicuous figure here.

DISGRACE OF USING WEAPONS OF WEAK

By DR. FRANK CRANE

RECENTLY there was a procession of the maimed and wounded veteran soldiers of France conducted in silence, with the hope of inducing the United States to relent in its demand for payment of its war debt.

This is somewhat akin to the hunger strike as recently practiced by advocates of various causes.

In substance it is to say that we acknowledge your superior power, but if you exercise it and if you compel us to live up to the exact terms of our obligation we will come around and be sick on your doorstep.

It is the tyranny of tears.

Many strong men are under the domination of their wives simply because to refuse the wives their way brings on an unpleasant scene. They will cry or have an attack of nerves, or otherwise make the home disagreeable.

Perhaps the weaker people cannot be blamed for this, for it is their only weapon. They have not the strength to carry out their will. They have only strength enough to arouse pity and sentiment which they hope will accomplish their purpose.

Babies learn this very early. The only weapon is to cry. By making a loud noise they hope to get their way.

When we grow up we become adepts in hypocrisy and instead of crying we indulge in complaining.

But it is all the same. A complaining man or woman is simply a grown-up baby.

We are all familiar with the man or woman in a club or church whom all must placate in order to keep the recalcitrant individual from making trouble.

It is not a pleasant spectacle to see a mendicant making a living by exhibiting his sores, nor to see a household dominated by a whining child, nor to see a strong man terrorized because he is afraid his wife will flop.

It is no disgrace to be weak, but it is a disgrace to use your weakness as a weapon by which to gain your own way.

The tyranny of the strong by force is intolerable, but it is no more intolerable than the tyranny of the weak by their adopting means to make matters unpleasant until they accomplish their purpose.

Women as Astronomers

By Garrett P. Serviss

EVERY YEAR the debt of modern astronomy to women is increased. To their interest in this sublime science we owe some of the most remarkable advances of recent years in the study of the stars. I should have to fill a column with names if I undertook to mention individually the women workers in practical astronomy, many of whom have contributed fundamental additions to the science. They have been remarkably successful in the study and interpretation of celestial photographs, particularly of stellar spectra, from which is derived a knowledge of the constitution and evolution of stars.

There is a fineness of visual perception and an aesthetic sensibility to delicate differences and resemblances, required in the analytic study of the minute stellar images on a celestial photograph, that make it a work peculiarly suited to the mental temperament of women.

The great Harvard classifications of the stars and the grand generalizations out of which the latest theories of stellar evolution, and of the history of the universe have grown, are largely based upon the results of the masterly work of women astronomers, studying with an inventiveness matched by the intelligence that guides it, the revelations impressed upon star photographs, in character interpretable only to a specially trained eye and mind.

Women, too, have added the charm of their consolation to the efforts of those who have devoted themselves, like the late Camille Flammarion, to the popularization of astronomical knowledge and the spread of a wide general interest in the subject, and this has been the soil wherefrom have sprung many of the leaders of practical astronomy today. Flammarion died at his telescope, wrapped in his observer's mantle, one night last year, and although no notable discoveries were associated with his name, yet he had considered the stars with such expansive sympathy that hundreds of thousands looked at them through his eyes and shared the thoughts that they aroused in him. His widow, Madame Gabrielle-Camille Flammarion, has taken his place as director of his observatory at Juvisy near Paris, and has also undertaken to continue his labors in the popularization of astronomy.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

GIVES you a queer feeling to look at the Little Chap when he's asleep, doesn't it?

Seems so young and helpless—yet he's a big boy, now—going on thirteen. And heaven knows there's nothing helpless about him during his waking hours—if ever a youngster raised Cain—but lying there asleep, curled up with his hair all tousled, he's a baby again. That dirty, rough little paw, it still has something of the baby shapelessness. That freckled nose—only just beginning to grow a regular bridge. The back of his neck—you stoop and kiss it with a sudden tug at your heart.

Your little son! How few the years are, after all, since you heard that first, faint cry. And how unreasonable you are to expect so much of him. What if he doesn't pick up after himself—or remember what you told him to get at the grocery? What if he does sneak out of his Saturday morning chores? There's plenty of time yet for the stress and pain of life. Thank God you can keep him a baby yet—for a little while.

You've felt that way often and often, haven't you, my dear? Tucking them in at night—breathing a little prayer to God to keep YOUR babies safe. But did you ever stop to think of the other little tykes who aren't YOUR babies, who crawl up late to cold and frowsy beds, and sleep with tears of weariness upon their cheeks? The other little tads who are still "mothin' but babies" yet who carry burdens that would crush mature men and women?

Working Her Way

There's Dora, for instance. Dora is fifteen. She's "working her way through High School" in Mrs. Gale's house. Dora's undersized, a nervous, dreamy girl going through a difficult adolescence. If she were your little girl you'd worry about her thin chest, that habit of twitching she has. Dora looks like a baby, too, when she sleeps—but this is her daily program:

She rises at six—gives the Gale baby his bottle, gets breakfast for Mr. Gale and Tom, takes coffee and toast and the paper into Mrs. Gale, stacks the dishes and gives the kitchen a tidying then scoots for her eight o'clock class. After school she washes the breakfast and lunch dishes, sweeps and dusts the house (Mrs. Gale being out walking or visiting with a baby), prepares the vegetables for dinner and usually starts them cooking. Sets the table. Makes the bed. Irons some of the baby's clothes—there is always a pile of baby clothes to be ironed, and of Mrs. Gale's finer things.

Sometimes Mrs. Gale arrives home in time to put dinner on the table—often not. Theoretically Dora "eats" with the family. Actually she spends most of the time on her feet serving them or caring for the fretful baby. Her own dinner she takes in hurried sips.

Nothing but Drudgery.

After dinner she cleans the kitchen and dining room again, she does the dishes, then settles down to study and "watch baby" while Mr. and Mrs. Gale go out. On Saturday she has a full day of cleaning and cooking. Sunday is her worst day of all for the Gales like Sunday company. Or they frequently go out and leave the baby with her. One in a very great while she is given a ticket for a movie. She never has a whole Saturday or Sunday to herself.

All this Dora does for her "room and board" while she goes to High School. Mrs. Gale now and then gives her a second hand dress. Every one says, "Isn't it lucky that Dora has such a lovely home to live in while she goes to school?"

There are "Doras" in every community. We would rend the heavens with our protests if anyone abused OUR children in such a manner, yet we watch the abuse of other children with the utmost complacency in eleven States of the Union, even worse abuse is countenanced. In these States children, who are the wards of the States, are placed with foster parents under a contract which is practically equivalent with the old "binding out" process.

This indenture agreement implies an arrangement whereby the foster home takes the child because it needs household help or farm labor and proceeds to extract such labor from the child. The little Dora who returns in the way of education or affection. Recent investigation by the United States Children's Bureau has revealed the fact that thousands of children are thus condemned to terms of semi-servitude, often enforced by the utmost severity.
